Coal Burning At K St. Plant Limited

By BOB GUNTHER

Star Staff Writer

The State Environmental Control Council Thursday restricted the burning of coal at Lincoln Electric System's (LES) K St. power plant to cut air pollution.

LES can burn no more than 10,644 tons of coal at the K St. plant between now and July 31, 1976, according to LES' interpretation of the order.

Phil Michaels, LES power supply manager, said plans were to burn 14,901 tons of coal at the plant during 1975-76 to provide steam heat for the dwindling number of downtown businesses relying on it.

'Better Than Nothing'

Michaels said he is "happy" with the council's ruling: "It's better than nothing," he said.

Without the extension, LES could have burned only oil and gas to provide the steam heat this winter — prospects which LES didn't like.

Gary Walsh, Lincoln-Lancaster air pollution officer; the southeast Nebraska chapter of the American Lung Association; and the Lancaster County League of Women Voters opposed the extension.

The controversy over the K St. plant evolved because the plant is violating air standards for ash emissions. LES did not want to install an expensive air pollution controls on a 45-year-old plant which will be phased out by 1980.

Instead, air pollution officials have asked LES to stop burning coal at the plant and substitute oil. LES wants to continue burning coal until its steam heat customers have converted to other heating systems.

To get the variance, LES had to demonstrate that overall air quality standards in Lincoln would not be harmed by the extension and that they made a good faith attempt to meet the July 31, 1975 deadline.

Had Six Extensions

Walsh noted that LES has been granted six extensions since 1972 for the K St. plant and has yet to come up with an acceptable plan to cut air pollution.

Reciting a litany of letters from LES promising to stop the use of coal through the years, Walsh questioned whether LES had acted in good faith.

"We seem to have been told something years ago by LES, and all of the sudden they've changed their direction," he said.

Could Meet Demands

Noting that he is not advocating shutting the K St. plant down, Walsh said LES could meet the demands of its steam customers and air pollution standards by burning oil it has stored in southwest Lincoln.

In addition, he noted that ash and dust readings taken at the City-County Building indicate the air quality there does not meet national standards, due to the presence of the K St. plant 500 feet away.

Gene Robinson, air pollution chief for the State Department of Environmental Control, said other utilities faced with pollution problems stemming from aging power plants have a better track record than LES.

Get Behind Wheel

"I think we should get behind the wheel on this instead of letting LES tell us what to do," Robinson said.

said. "Fremont is in the same situation, and they're installing equipment."

Afterwards, Michaels said he does not anticipate problems in getting the additional light oils as dictated by the council. His concern is with a failure in the oil system.

"There's only one system with 100 components. We don't have a back-up system," Michaels said. Should anything go wrong, downtown shoppers and businesses could find themselves without heat.

"There are limitations on the storage facilities for oil and the system," he said.

After listening to the arguments, Mrs. Margaret Sutherland of Lincoln moved to deny LES the variance and allow coal burning only in emergencies. That motion failed on a 4-5 vote with one abstention.

Short Of Majority

A subsequent motion to allow LES to burn all the coal it needed failed on an 8-1 vote with one abstention. It failed because state law requires a majority of the 16-member council must approve such action. Only ten were present. Richard Dugdale of Omaha, who held the ninth vote, abstained.

Dugdale is an Omaha Public Power District board member and for him to vote would have been a conflict of interest, since LES will buy power from OPPD's new Ft. Calhoun nuclear plant.

George David of Lincoln cast the lone no vote.

David subsequently moved to limit LES to generating no more than 25% of its K St. power with coal. It carried 9-0 with Dugdale abstaining.

House Rejects Turkey Arms Sales

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House rejected President Ford's effort to resume arms sales to Turkey Thursday as opponents argued his plan would be submission to blackmail.

After the 223 to 206 vote, Ford said the decision "can only do the most serious and irreparable damage to the vital national security interests of the United States."

He said it will affect not only "normally excellent relations" with Turkey and its NATO alliance but also U.S. efforts to reach a settlement between Greece and Turkey over the Cyprus issue.

Nebraska Republican Reps. John Y. McCollister, Virginia Smith and Charles Thome voted in favor of the arms sales.

Ford had made a last-minute appeal in a letter to the House, pledging to seek a settlement of the Cyprus dispute.

Opponents argued that Ford was submitting to "blackmail" by not pressuring Turkey to reduce its occupation forces on Cyprus in exchange for the arms sales. They said he was worried about Turkish threats to close U.S. bases in Turkey.

Others said Turkey violated U.S. aid laws in its invasion of Cyprus and that resuming arms aid would set a dangerous precedent.

If passed, the bill would have permitted transfer of $185 million in weapons Turkey had contracted for before Feb. 5. On that day, Congress cut off all U.S. military aid to Turkey because of its invasion of Cyprus.

In effect, the bill would lift Congress' embargo on cash and credit weapons sales to Turkey but continue the ban on grants of military aid.

In his statement, Ford said he hoped the House would "reconsider its failure to act affirmatively."

But Rep. William S. Broomfield of Michigan, ranking Republican on the House International Relations Committee, said he sees no other alternative for getting a compromise.

"The House has responded with its position," Broomfield said, "but I think they've assumed a heavy burden by making this foreign policy decision and preventing the administration from negotiating."

Applause burst from the galleries and the floor as the arms sale, which was being approved during most of the electronic vote, suddenly reversed in the final minute and was rejected.

Rep. Ed Beard, D-R.I., said, "I am delighted with the vote and extremely happy Congress did not get into a blackmail situation. I called this machine gun diplomacy."

Splashdown Ends Apollo Era

ABOARD USS NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Three astronauts returned safely to earth Thursday after a voyage in orbit with Soviet cosmonauts. The splashdown ended the Apollo era of space exploration.

Astronauts Thomas P. Stafford, Vance D. Brand and Donald K. "Deke" Slayton rode their Apollo craft through a long blazing arc across Pacific skies and splashed down safely at 4:20 p.m. CDT, 330 miles west of Pearl Harbor, Hawaii.

"Everything went great," Stafford said. "It was a great ending to the Apollo project."

The astronauts' Apollo craft was lowered by crane to the deck of this prime recovery ship only 40 minutes after it splashed. The astronauts, dressed in rust-colored space suits and wearing baseball-style caps, looked haggard but walked jauntily and snapped smart salutes at white uniformed naval officers.

President Ford, in a call to the ship from the White House, told the spacemen that their mission "adds a new dimension to international cooperation and this is extremely important now and in the days ahead."

Thus ended a space voyage of international cooperation, of new scientific exploration of the universe and the finale to a pioneering age for the spacecraft system which first carried man to the moon.

"It was so much fun the past nine days," said Slayton, a man who waited 16 years for his first space trip. "I hate to go back to work again."

Brand, another space rookie, told the shipboard crowd: "I've wondered all these years what this day would be like. It is a great feeling."

In their brief talk, President Ford called Slayton "an old-timer in space" and the astronaut responded, "maybe some day we can take you up there in the shuttle."

Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev sent a telegram of congratulations to Ford that said "the flight of the Soyuz and Apollo spaceships is of historic significance as a symbol of the current progress of easing of international tension and improvement of Soviet-U.S. relations on the basis of the principles of peaceful coexistence."

Apollo's final return to earth from space was flawless.

"This baby is right on," said Stafford as his craft fell toward the ocean.

Moments later, the cone-shaped craft came into view of television cameras stationed on board the prime recovery ship USS New Orleans.

It swung gently beneath three main parachutes, red and white mushrooms of straining cloth, and slowly descended through a clear blue sky.

"Contact!" announced Stafford, a veteran astronaut home from his fourth space voyage.

The craft turned over in the gently tossing Pacific and a television view showed clearly the fire-scarred bottom of the spaceship. Inflation bags activated by the astronauts forced the craft upright and it bobbed in the water, reflecting sunlight off its silver hull.

Helicopters quickly hovered over the fallen space bird.

The astronauts started their fiery journey home with a seven-second rocket burst that settled the Apollo into the grasp of the earth's atmosphere.

The rocket burst was in darkness over the Indian Ocean and the craft streaked like a meteor over Australia and the Pacific.

At 75 miles above the earth, the spacecraft scorched from the friction of its high-speed plunge.

Moments later, small parachutes snapped into the wind, slowing the craft to 125 miles an hour. At 10,000 feet, the three main parachutes unfolded and the ship fell cleanly to the ocean.

After splashdown, frogmen leaped into the ocean to attach a raft and a flotation collar. One of the black-garbed swimmers looked through a spacecraft window and gave a thumbs-up sign, the happy signal that all was well.

Portuguese Report Unrest In Azores

LISBON, Portugal (AP) — Portuguese newspapers reported unrest in the Azores Islands on Thursday, but sources in the archipelago denied news accounts that a navy frigate had been sent to one of the islands to put down trouble.

The frigate Joao Belo remained at its station in San Miguel Island, a diplomatic source said. Lisbon news reports had claimed the Joao Belo had been sent to Terceira Island, the site of a big U.S. Air Force base 200 miles away.

The Lisbon newspapers, under Communist domination, also said local officials had been ousted and there was pressure for independence. The newspapers termed the atmosphere on Terceira "absolutely scandalous" and indicated troops there, mostly Azoreans, were shirking their duty.

Communication with the nine-island archipelago 900 miles out in the Atlantic is slow and difficult from the mainland.

Sentiment for independence from the leftist government in Lisbon has been building in the Azores since the April elections when the centrist Popular Democrat party (PPD) won 66% of the islands' vote. The Left got only 4%.

A demonstration was scheduled Thursday in Angra do

Herismo, capital of Terceira Island. It was supposedly promoted by center groups and the Azores Liberation Front, a small proindependence group.

News reports said the civil governor, the head of the chamber of commerce and other local officials had resigned but gave no details. They were put in their jobs after the armed forces revolution 15 months ago ousted the old Portuguese right-wing regime.

In Lisbon, the army met to re-establish what its chief indicated was deteriorating discipline in both the military and the country. It came amid reports of opposition within the armed forces to a plan to give the nation's three key military leaders unprecedented power.

Chief of Staff Carlos Fabio told an army assembly it was necessary to "regroup to truly re-think and reaffirm discipline ... to make units more cohesive and ... to re-establish discipline in the country itself."

Faced with a possible moderate backlash to leftist influence in the government, trade unions and the news media — a score of Communist party headquarters have been sacked in the past few days and two persons killed and 30 injured — Fabio acknowledged that national discipline was in "a very sensitive phase."

His remarks came the day before the full 250-man Armed Forces Movement was to consider putting control of the country in the hands of a troika made up of the president, the premier and the security chief — all generals and dedicated leftists.

The plan would give President Francisco da Costa Gomes, Premier Vasco Goncalves and security chief Brig. Gen. Oteo Sarai da Carvalho massive powers. It appeared to consolidate the position of Goncalves, a Communist sympathizer, despite objections from more moderate officers.

The Socialist and Popular Democrat parties, Portugal's two largest and now in opposition because of what they term threats to democracy, have demanded Goncalves' ouster as a condition for returning to the cabinet.

In Ansiao, a town 100 miles north of Lisbon, a group sacked the headquarters of the Communist party and its satellite, the Portuguese Democratic Movement, burning the parties' office materials in the street. Such attacks have erupted almost daily in conservative northern Portugal.

A possible violent showdown was feared Sunday in Braganca near the Spanish border where Roman Catholics called for a mass rally in support of the church's efforts to recover its radio station from control of leftist employees supported by the military.

Senate Extends Parts Of Voting Rights Act

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate passed a bill Thursday night extending key parts of the 1965 Voting Rights Act for seven years and expanding its protections against discrimination to language-minority groups.

The vote was 77 to 12.

It also would make permanent a ban on literacy tests and similar devices for the qualification of voters.

The measure will have to go back to the House because of Senate amendments.

Sen. John Tunney, D-Calif., floor manager of the bill, read a letter from Rep. Peter Rodino, D-N.J., chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, and Rep. Don Edwards, D-Calif., the bill's chief House sponsor, saying they would recommend House acceptance of the Senate amendments.

The measure will have to go back to the House because of Senate amendments.

The main amendment limits the extension provisions to seven years. The House provided for a 10-year extension when it passed the bill June 4.

Another relatively minor amendment, adopted by voice vote shortly before passage, would permit election materials for Alaskan natives to be printed in English if this is their predominant written language.

The original act was designed to prevent denial of voting rights on account of race or color, and it has been cited frequently as the most effective civil rights legislation ever passed. It has brought dramatic increases in black voting and the election of black officials in the South.

Extension of the law's protection of the voting rights for language minorities would bring additional areas under the restrictions now applying to Southern states.

Areas with a population of 5% or more of Americans of Spanish heritage, American Indians, Asian Americans, or Alaskan natives and where voter registration or turnout was less than 50% in the 1972 presidential election would be covered.

This would expand coverage to the entire state of Texas and to parts of Arizona, California, Florida, Colorado, New Mexico, Oklahoma, New York, South Dakota and Utah.

In addition to having to provide bilingual ballots and election materials, these areas would be subject like the presently covered areas to preclearance of election law changes and to the use of federal registrars and election observers.

In other areas with 5% or greater concentration of a language minority and an illiteracy rate among the group higher than the national average, bilingual election materials would be required.

The Senate, operating under a tight time limit on debate, rejected a series of amendments designed to free presently covered states from the law's restrictions.

Sponsors of the amendments argued that extension of the special coverage sections was punitive and failed to recognize steps taken in the South to prevent discriminatory practices.

Egyptian Plan Received

Jerusalem — Egyptian proposals for a new Sinai accord, including a map detailing Cairo's recommendation for a new cease-fire line, were received in Jerusalem from Washington. Senior Israeli officials said they were "serious and well-considered," but that important differences have to be overcome on several issues.

Internment Policy To End

London — In a move obviously made to maintain the fragile five-month-old Ulster cease-fire, the British government announced plans to end the controversial internment policy in Northern Ireland and to release all internees by Christmas. The announcement in the House of Commons by Merlyn Rees, the Northern Ireland secretary, raised immediate protests from representative Protestant leaders in Ulster.

Court Changes Barred

New Delhi — The Indian Parliament, moving along swiftly now that the opposition members have walked out, barred the courts Thursday from upsetting states of emergency like the current one, which gives Prime Minister Indira Gandhi sweeping powers.

Prosecutor Still Wanted

Washington — Atty. Gen. Edward H. Levi said Thursday he will urge the Watergate Special Prosecutor's office be kept open until the appeals from several of its cases are settled. Levi said in an interview that he planned to meet with Henry S. Ruth, the special prosecutor, and ask Ruth to stay on or to propose that another special prosecutor be appointed to continue the office's operation.

Trend In Record Prices Of Beef Said Continuing On Retail Level

WASHINGTON (AP) — Retail beef prices soared to record levels last month, and the trend appeared to continue in early July despite some leveling-off of farm livestock prices, according to Agriculture Department figures released Thursday.

Meat accounts for about 30% of consumer food spending and sustained increases for beef and pork in the past have helped push up over-all grocery costs substantially.

Retail food prices rose an average of 14.5% in each of the past two years. USDA experts have said that a 6 to 8% increase can be expected in 1975 if farmers get record grain crops as now indicated.

A bumper corn crop, for example, would be expected to result in reduced feed costs, stimulate livestock production and make more meat, milk and poultry products available through most of next year.

The department said retail beef prices in June averaged a record of nearly $1.58 a pound on an all-cut basis, up 10 cents a pound from May. The previous high was $1.50 a pound in February 1974.

Pork in retail stores averaged nearly $1.31 a pound last month, up from $1.23 in May. The record was almost $1.32 a pound in August 1973.

Preliminary figures for this month showed that beef retail prices continued to rise and averaged more than $1.63 a pound by July 5, and that pork rose to a record of almost $1.41 a pound.

Portuguese Report Unrest In Azores

LISBON, Portugal (AP) — Portuguese newspapers reported unrest in the Azores Islands on Thursday, but in the archipelago denied news accounts that a navy frigate had been sent to one of the islands to put down trouble.

The frigate Joao Belo remained at its station in San Miguel Island, a diplomatic source said. Lisbon news reports had claimed the Joao Belo had been sent to Terceira Island, the site of a big U.S. Air Force base 200 miles away.

The Lisbon newspapers, under Communist domination, also said local officials had been ousted and there was pressure for independence. The newspapers termed the atmosphere on Terceira "absolutely scandalous" and indicated troops there, mostly Azoreans, were shirking their duty.

Communication with the nine-island archipelago 900 miles out in the Atlantic is slow and difficult from the mainland.

Sentiment for independence from the leftist government in Lisbon has been building in the Azores since the April elections when the centrist Popular Democrat party (PPD) won 66% of the islands' vote. The Left got only 4%.

A demonstration was scheduled Thursday in Angra do

Herismo, capital of Terceira Island. It was supposedly promoted by center groups and the Azores Liberation Front, a small proindependence group.

News reports said the civil governor, the head of the chamber of commerce and other local officials had resigned but gave no details. They were put in their jobs after the armed forces revolution 15 months ago ousted the old Portuguese right-wing regime.

In Lisbon, the army met to re-establish what its chief indicated was deteriorating discipline in both the military and the country. It came amid reports of opposition within the armed forces to a plan to give the nation's three key military leaders unprecedented power.

Chief of Staff Carlos Fabio told an army assembly it was necessary to "regroup to truly re-think and reaffirm discipline . . . to make units more cohesive and . . . to re-establish discipline in the country itself."

Faced with a possible moderate backlash to leftist influence in the government, trade unions and the news media — a score of Communist party headquarters have been sacked in the past few days and two persons killed and 50 injured — Fabio acknowledged that national discipline was in "a very sensitive phase."

His remarks came the day before the full 250-man Armed Forces Movement was to consider putting control of the country in the hands of a troika made up of the president, the premier and the security chief — all generals and dedicated leftists.

The plan would give President Francisco da Costa Gomes, Premier Vasco Goncalves and security chief Brig. Gen. Otelo Saraiva de Carvalho massive powers. It appeared to consolidate the position of Goncalves, a Communist sympathizer, despite objections from more moderate officers.

Preliminary figures for this month showed that beef retail prices continued to rise and averaged more than $1.63 a pound by July 5, and that pork rose to a record of almost $1.41 a pound.

Market prices of choice-grade cattle averaged $52.33 per 100 pounds in June, up from $49.44 in May. Hogs were $51.19 per 100 pounds, compared with $46.44 in May. Hogs were $51.19 per 100 pounds, compared with $46.44 in May. Compared with a year earlier June cattle prices were up almost 39% and hogs were up nearly 87%, the report said.

Department economists say they still expect livestock prices to ease down by fall and winter, particularly if bumper grain crops materialize.

The report said that middleman charges for transporting, processing and selling farm-produced food to consumers — also called marketing spreads — increased five-tenths of one per cent in June and averaged 3.1% more than in June 1974.

Meanwhile, returns to farmers for raw products as measured by USDA's market basket of 65 food items increased 4.7% in June from May and were 15.1% above June last year.

"Most of the increase resulted from a sharp jump in prices for beef cattle, hogs, broilers and fresh vegetables — particularly potatoes and tomatoes," the report said.

The analysis showed that of a retail beef price of almost $1.58 a pound in June the farmer's share was more than $1.10 compared with less than $1.04 a pound in May. The middleman portion also rose to 47.6 cents a pound in June, up from 43.9 in May.

Roman Catholic Priests Promote Sexual Equality

Washington (UPI) — A group of Roman Catholic priests from across the country announced formation Thursday of an organization to push for complete sexual equality, including ordination of women to the Roman Catholic priesthood.

To be known as Priests for Equality, the organization said it will seek to promote and implement sexual equality in the church's "life and structures."

"By excluding women from decision-making and the fullness of ministry, we are reinforcing sexual discrimination in society," the charter of the new group said. "We hobble ourselves and deny our community many rich charisms (gifts) which we need to help build a world of peace, freedom and justice."

Some 75 priests from 27 dioceses signed the charter statement.

Organization of the group comes as the issue of ordination of women is just beginning to stir in the 48 million-member Roman Catholic Church.

A group of Roman Catholic women have called for a major "action" conference this fall to map a strategy aimed at ordination of women.

But as recently as April, Pope Paul VI appeared to close any door that might have been open to the idea of ordination of women.

The new priests' group said, "Priests are a key group within the church. Together with our bishops we play a pivotal role in either maintaining sexual discrimination or in building a new equality."

"In the past," the group said, "we have often been mute onlookers in the presence of discrimination toward women in our society and in our church."

Senate Extends Parts Of Voting Rights Act

Ford Plans To Sign Europe Security Pact

Washington (UPI) — President Ford will sign the 35-nation European Security Agreement in Helsinki next week for the sake of East-West detente, trade, economic and humane reasons, a White House spokesman said Thursday.

Press secretary Ron Nessen told a news conference, when asked about criticism of the pact, "I would expect the President would go ahead."

He listed the reasons why the agreement will have a "special value" to the United States. Among the reasons:

The agreement is designed to increase East-West trade and economic relations.

The agreement will help families split by the East-West line in that it calls for all parties, including the communists, to allow for free access across borders, make it easier for couples divided by the line to marry, and provide for ease of movement in the East for Western journalists.

Nessen said the agreement will be of use to the United States therefore "in many ways."

Newsmen Stop Closed Meeting

Omaha (UPI) — A meeting between state auditors, corrections officials and Omaha's 7th Step Foundation, Inc. failed to materialize Thursday after newsmen challenged whether the auditors had the right to conduct the meeting behind closed doors.

Before the meetings started, the auditors informed newsmen from UPI, WOW-TV, and WOW Radio they would be barred from the proceedings.

The auditors, Larry Morrison and Obed Cramer, contended the audit of 7th Step was a "partial one" and was yet to be a matter of public record.

UPI reporter Jon Sweet questioned the auditors' statement and telephoned the state attorney general's office in Lincoln from the meeting location in the Region I Crime Commission office. The call was made at UPI's expense.

Maybe Under Law

Sweet said he was advised by Asst. Atty. Gen. Harold Mosher that the meeting could very well fall under the open meetings statute since representatives of state and county agencies as well as 7th Step, which is funded from public monies, were involved.

Mosher advised Sweet the group could take a vote, and if the majority ruled, the meeting could be closed. Such an action could be in order, Mosher said, if the audit revealed, for example, something of what could be a criminal nature.

Sweet advised the auditors of his conversation with Mosher and urged them to call him and present their side of the case. However, they declined to do so and canceled the meeting.

Among those present were Omaha Police Chief Richard Andersen, who is vice chairman of the State Crime Commission, Dee Lofgreen, chief of the commission's corrections division, Douglas County Sheriff Ted Janning, County Corrections Director Charles Terry, his fiscal analyst Mike Farhart, State Crime Commission member Mike Jackson of Omaha and Bob Harrison of the Region I Crime Commission.

In addition, 7th Step was represented by John Sevren.

New Mid-State Dispute Opened

Grand Island (AP) — Don Shriner, general manager of the Mid-State Irrigation Project, has opened another round in the dispute between Mid-State and the National Audubon Society, which is opposed to the project.

Shriner has written to Donald Alexander, director of Internal Revenue Service, asking if the Audubon Society has tax-exempt status.

If the society does have tax-exempt status, Shriner asks whether IRS regulations permit such a group to conduct "lobbying activities."

Shriner also asked that if such activities are permitted, must the society file reports on the expenditures it makes in these areas.

Enclosed with the letter were newspaper clippings which Shriner said show that the society "has made direct efforts with a subcommittee of the House of Representatives, in that they delivered an internal memo of the Department of Interior to this subcommittee."

The memo in question advises the deauthorization of the Mid-State Project, but was rejected by top departmental officials.

Shriner also asked Alexander to conduct "an immediate investigation" if there are restrictions against lobbying efforts by a tax-exempt group.

Ron Klataske, National Audubon Society regional representative from Alma, Kan., described Shriner's letter as "grasping at straws."

"He's afraid to confront national conservation organizations on solid ground," Klataske said. "There's no way you can construe delivery of an Interior Department document to a House subcommittee as an attempt to lobby."

"It's simply an attempt to make available, to the House and to the public, information which is available to anyone through the Freedom of Information Act," Klataske said.

"We feel that in terms of lobbying, the public should be concerned about the expenditure of tax funds levied by the Mid-State district and paid directly to a lobbyist in Washington, D.C.," he said.

The Mid-State district, he said, has budgeted $12,000 to be paid to Floyd Dominy, former commissioner of reclamation, for lobbying on behalf of Mid-State.

The key to lobbying restrictions imposed on tax-exempt organizations is that they can't devote "a substantial part of their total effort and revenues" to lobbying, Klataske said. Congress is currently trying to define lobbying precisely, and determine what constitutes "substantial" lobbying, he said.

Lana Selch, a girlfriend of Barajas, testified that the three had gone to the lake early on the morning of March 2 for target shooting.

She said Mousseaux made drunken advances and a struggle ensued between Barajas and Mousseaux. She said she could not remember what time passed between shots fired, although she did hear the shots.

Barajas said Mousseaux began to choke him and he remembers nothing else until he was standing over the body.

Newsmen Stop Closed Meeting

Omaha (UPI) — A meeting between state auditors, corrections officials and Omaha's 7th Step Foundation, Inc. failed to materialize Thursday after newsmen challenged whether the auditors had the right to conduct the meeting behind closed doors.

Before the meetings started, the auditors informed newsmen from UPI, WOW-TV, and WOW Radio they would be barred from the proceedings. The auditors, Larry Morrison and Obed Cramer, contended the audit of 7th Step was a "partial one" and was yet to be a matter of public record.

UPI reporter Jon Sweet questioned the auditors' statement and telephoned the state attorney general's office in Lincoln from the meeting location in the Region I Crime Commission office. The call was made at UPI's expense.

Maybe Under Law
Sweet said he was advised by Asst. Atty. Gen. Harold Mosher that the meeting could very well fall under the open meetings statute since representatives of state and county agencies as well as 7th Step, which is funded from public monies, were involved.

Mosher advised Sweet the group could take a vote, and if the majority ruled, the meeting could be closed. Such an action could be in order, Mosher said, if the audit revealed, for example, something of what could be a criminal nature.

Sweet advised the auditors of his conversation with Mosher and urged them to call him and present their side of the case. However, they declined to do so and canceled the meeting.

Among those present were Omaha Police Chief Richard Andersen, who is vice chairman of the State Crime Commission, Dee Loegreen, chief of the commission's corrections division, Douglas County Sheriff Ted Janning, County Corrections Director Charles Terry, his fiscal analyst Mike Farhart, State Crime Commission member Mike Jackson of Omaha and Bob Harrison of the Region I Crime Commission.

In addition, 7th Step was represented by John Sevren.

New Mid-State Dispute Opened

Grand Island (AP) — Don Shriner, general manager of the Mid-State Irrigation Project, has opened another round in the dispute between Mid-State and the National Audubon Society, which is opposed to the project.

Shriner has written to Donald Alexander, director of Internal Revenue Service, asking if the Audubon Society has tax-exempt status.

If the society does have tax-exempt status, Shriner asks whether IRS regulations permit such a group to conduct "lobbying activities."

Shriner also asked that if such activities are permitted, must the society file reports on the expenditures it makes in these areas.

Enclosed with the letter were newspaper clippings which Shriner said show that the society "has made direct efforts with a subcommittee of the House of Representatives, in that they delivered an internal memo of the Department of Interior to this subcommittee."

The memo in question advises the deauthorization of the Mid-State Project, but was rejected by top departmental officials.

Shriner also asked Alexander to conduct "an immediate investigation" if there are restrictions against lobbying efforts by a tax-exempt group.

Ron Klataske, National Audubon Society regional representative from Alma, Kan., described Shriner's letter as "grasping at straws."

"He's afraid to confront national conservation organizations on solid ground," Klataske said. "There's no way you can construe delivery of an Interior Department document to a House subcommittee as an attempt to lobby."

Prosecution Rests In Gering Murder Trial

Gering (AP) — The prosecution rested its case in the first degree murder trial of Arturo Barajas Thursday afternoon and closing arguments were expected Friday morning from both the defense and prosecution.

Barajas, 22, is charged with the March 2 shooting death of Leo Mousseaux Jr., 21, also of Scottsbluff.

The body of Mousseaux was discovered at the edge of Little Lake Alice, north of Scottsbluff. He had been shot six times.

Scottsbluff pathologist Dr. Allen Armstrong testified that a chest wound sustained by Mousseaux came at least two minutes before fatal shots in the head.

HUGE MACHINE ... designed to grind complete stack of hay and load it onto feedwagon.

Farmers Jam Mead Field Day

By DOMINICK COSTELLO

Farm Editor

Mead — The 24th annual Tractor Power and Safety Day at the University of Nebraska Field Laboratory Thursday drew thousands of farmers to see 80 farm equipment exhibits valued at $3 million.

The display building was wall to wall people with huge crowds outside watching the machinery parade. Food stands in the building were completely sold out shortly after noon as the crowd's appetite exceeded the available food supply.

The star of the harvesting show was a new twin rotary cylinder combine which threshed a field of 20 acres of oats planted late to be harvested at the field day.

Giant Machines

A larger than ever hay harvesting show featured huge machines to make bales of hay, even larger machines to make instant hay stacks and still more gigantic machines designed to grind the huge stacks into feed for use in automated feeding equipment.

Energy, its uses and conservation seemed to be a part of most of the displays. One man touted a watering tank that didn't need any artificial heat to keep it from freezing, several salesmen displayed equipment designed to conserve manure as fertilizer or provide easier ways to transport manure to the field and inject it into the soil so it wouldn't be lost to the wind.

There were displays of equipment being developed to heat homes and livestock buildings with solar heat. "Actually it is easier to heat a livestock building than a home because you aren't dealing with a big difference in temperature," explained Dr. James Deshazer, who heads the solar heat research group.

Lot Of Collector

Deshazer noted that it would require a heat collector about half the size of the square feet of space in your home to heat it with solar heat given the present state of the art.

A tiny irrigation motor powered by electricity generated by solar pumps was on display. A student demonstrating it said it was still prohibitively expensive but had possibilities if some cheaper way of converting sunshine to electricity was developed.

Older farmers introduced their sons and grandsons to some of the machines they used in their youth at the displays of a steam-powered tractor, a one-cylinder three horsepower engine and several older model tractors.

The old steam tractor had only 20 horsepower on the draw bar but could pull seven plows. It had 60 horsepower on the belt pulley. "One reason it pulled so well for its power was its heavy weight and then, too, it moved a lot slower than modern tractors," explained D. E. Lane, extension engineer at NU.

"It had nothing to do with this," Terry said.

Farmers learned that a so-called hard tractor cab might not provide total protection for the tractor driver in every turnover.

A cab structure designed to the minimum legal standard for a hard tractor cab was crushed flat when a tractor was tipped over in a 30-inch ditch. Rollin Schnieder, extension safety specialist, pointed out that even in flat Nebraska there were plenty of opportunities to tip a tractor over on the thousands of miles of roads, all of which have ditches on the side.

One of the more popular demonstrations was one featuring trickle irrigation with three different systems in a corn field. The system uses a minimum amount of water to reduce irrigation costs but it is still very much in the experimental stage.

Farmers seemed particularly interested in any kind of machine that used less fuel, cut labor costs, saved manure for use as fertilizer or saved time.

The 1975 tractor day really was a energy day this year at the University of Nebraska Field Laboratory.

Will The Real Alonzo Please Stand Trial?

Omaha (AP) — A Douglas County District Court jury found Alonzo Atwater, 23, guilty of robbery, writing an end to tale of mixup.

It was the third trial on the same charge for the man named Alonzo, but only the second court appearance for the real Alonzo Atwater.

In late June, another jury heard testimony for more than two days before it was discovered the "defendant" in the courtroom wasn't Alonzo Atwater at all. He was Alonzo's look-alike brother, Lawrence.

Both brothers were convicted by a jury last year of robbing an Omaha restaurant and both were sentenced to prison by Judge Theodore Richling.

On appeal, the Nebraska Supreme Court upheld the conviction of Lawrence, but ordered that Alonzo be retried because of procedural error.

The first new trial began June 23 and witnesses testified about the alleged robbery. In the third morning of the trial, it was discovered that the wrong brother had been sent up to trial by officials at the Nebraska Reformatory at Lincoln.

Lawrence Atwood later testified that he didn't tell anyone about the mistake because nobody asked him. Walter Matjeka, his attorney, said he could not tell the brothers apart and didn't know about the mistake until the mother of both men rose in court and pointed it out.

Judge Richling cited Lawrence for contempt of court and ordered a second retrial for Alonzo. The second trial began Monday and the jury returned its verdict late Wednesday. Judge Richling ordered a presentence investigation.

South Carolinian Killed In Crash South Of Sidney

Sidney (AP) — A South Carolinian was killed and a Colorado resident injured in the collision of two trucks on Nebraska Highway 19 about 10 miles south of Sidney Wednesday night.

Cheyenne County Atty. Thomas Sonntag identified the dead man as Bobby Barefoot, 31, of Columbia, S.C.

Authorities said Barefoot's semi-trailer was in collision with a truck driven by Larry Sorrell, 33, of Golden, Colo. Sorrell was reported in fair condition at a Sidney hospital with a fractured knee and abrasions.

The death raised Nebraska's 1975 traffic fatality toll to 185, compared with 210 at this time last year.

Regents Case An Example

It was the old justice tempered with mercy approach, and the right approach in our opinion. Lancaster County Attorney Ron Lahmers Thursday decided that while the University of Nebraska Board of Regents violated several provisions of the state's new open meeting law in connection with a closed meeting June 21, they did so unknowingly, and thus will not be prosecuted.

Lahmers said he found after investigation that some of the regents were completely unfamiliar with the law and some were only generally familiar with its terms. The law states that members of public bodies have to "knowingly violate" the law to be guilty of a criminal act.

The law went into effect May 27 this year and the regents' meeting June 21 was the first alleged violation of the statute to create a public stir. Upon deciding not to prosecute, Lahmers said he "certainly would" expect the board to know what the law is in the future. News coverage of the case should put other public bodies "on notice" of the new open meeting law, he said.

It is perhaps best that the first violations of the new law be held up for example and the violators left unprosecuted. This "knowingly" business can be debated back and forth and we think

Kicking The Wrong Shins

West Coast longshoremen, apparently the more enlightened of the species, indicated that they will not go along with a ban on loading American grain sold to the Soviet Union. "Our policy is to encourage two-way trade between Russia, China and the United States. We'll load any grain ships coming here," said a spokesman for a Seattle longshoremen's local.

But their east and gulf coast brethren, and organized labor's patriarch, have other ideas. Meeting in Miami Beach, representatives of the International Longshoremen's Association voted, as expected, to refuse to load American grain aboard ships bound for the Soviet Union. They gave union officials power to lift the ban if certain conditions are met.

The union wants assurance, said ILA President Thomas W. Gleason, that American ships load at least one-third of the grain according to a U.S.-Russia maritime agreement. That assurance was given specifically by President Ford.

But that's not all. "The assurance I want is very simple," said Gleason simplistically. "We want to know what most people would agree that Lahmers was generous, probably properly so, in his interpretation.

But some further observations are in order:

—Some of the regents, apparently, still do not believe they violated the law, which indicates the need for continued vigorous watchdogging of the regents board (one of the most "closed" of the state's government bodies) on the public's behalf.

—The regents should have known what the law said. Certainly William Swanson, former state senator and corporation secretary of the board, who helped to draft some provisions of the law, should have been aware of what it required and advised the board in that regard. When asked by a Star reporter how he could not know that the June 21 meeting violated the law, Swanson said "no comment." Ignorance of the law is not a defense for most citizens.

—The publicity surrounding the regents' meeting and Lahmers' decision should instruct members of other government bodies that they should take out the law and read it and understand it if they have not done so already.

Hopefully because of this controversy, the intent of the open meeting law — that the public's business will be carried out in public — will be more closely observed.

effect this sale will have on the cost of living."

If everybody else demanded such "assurances" by threatening to lay down their tools, the production machinery of this nation would collapse in entirety. Among other things, this is an exercise in gross selfishness.

But labor's old man, AFL-CIO President George Meany, takes the cake. Meany is sounding more and more like he should be put out to pasture. A supporter of the longshoremen's ban, Meany told congressmen this week about the best way, in his opinion, to deal with the Soviet Union: "If they kick us in the shins, we kick them in the shins. It's the only thing they understand."

Since Meany was talking about Russians, there must be a whole lot of American grain farmers wondering why their shins ache. And it has made them bitter. Said one Nebraska wheat grower: "I think we ought to stuff the wheat down the longshoremen's throats."

Now, there is something maybe they understand.

City In A Hair Shirt

NEW YORK — Alone among American cities, New York revels in abuse. It has a positive liking for being told of its shortcomings, and even goes about boasting that it is far worse than outsiders suspect.

This is why Americans west of the Hudson and north of the Bronx are wasting their energies in criticizing New York for its present financial squalor.

Consider the "Fear City" campaign publicized by the New York policemen's and firemen's unions. It was the quintessential New York act. Imagine. In what other city on earth would the cops greet arriving tourists with printed broadsides boasting about what a rotten job they were doing?

Not in Chicago, surely. Chicago is a booster's town. It has the best police force in America, and you know who says so? Not just the Chicago police, but Mayor Daley himself.

During the 1968 political riots at the Democratic convention, Chicagoans stopped reporters on the streets urging them to report that Chicago was not like that at all, not at all. A great town, they insisted. Tell the world.

If the Chicago riots had happened in New York, do you believe New Yorkers would have been buttonholing men from the Tribune with pleas to tell the good folk of Chicagoland what a swell place New York really was, underneath all that untypical violence?

New Yorkers would have been standing among the cracked skulls saying, "This is nothing. Monday night stuff. You ought to be here in Thursday when things really get rough."

This is probably a perverse form of pride. It is the New Yorkers' way of showing the world they can take it.

To do this, of course, they have to exaggerate the trials of New York living. Thus, although the crime rate is considerably lower than in many other cities, they persist in the belief that it is the most crime-ridden city on earth and glory in reminiscences of getting through the door to home just one step ahead of the mugger.

A colleague of mine had her purse stolen in a restaurant not long ago, and the patrons in stably rose and ran the thief to the ground on the sidewalk outside.

New Yorkers do not advertise this sort of show. It would detract from the heroism of living in "Fear City," where indifferent millions sit idly by while maddened beasts perpetrate unspeakable horrors on their victims.

One passage in the policemen's broadside proclaiming police incompetence urged tourists to note that the midtown streets of Manhattan were abandoned at night by a fearful citizenry. The man who composed that does not know what an abandoned street is. If you really want to see an abandoned street at night, you have to set a nocturnal foot out of doors in downtown Washington where you can walk half a mile at dinnertime and scarcely see a human face. Midtown Manhattan, by comparison, is Calcutta at high noon.

And most of these Manhattan night strollers, you may be sure, are silently applauding their own courage and feeling quite wonderful about living in a town where it is so easy to arrive home feeling like a hero.

Chicago, forever proclaiming its swellness, is the more typical American city. San Franciscans wear you down by insisting that you agree with them about what a lovely city they inhabit.

I once wrote an affectionate article about Baltimore, which I consider an almost perfect small city by American standards, and was deluged with letters from Baltimoreans furious because the piece suggested their city had shortcomings.

An article in a similar vein about New York would have produced angry mail accusing me of having taken money from the mayor to conceal the brutal facts.

Now there is this financial embarrassment, which will probably turn out to be truly painful after the political circus has ended, and the rest of the country is having a great time kicking New York around, although not half so great as New Yorkers are having.

LA Verna HASSLER

One evening recently, late in the day when the sun was setting with a great burst of color in the West, we had a shower of rain. There was nothing unusual about the shower of rain, although we are in need of rain, but the rainbow that followed was one of the most beautiful I have ever seen.

It made a vivid arch of colors across the sky, pure and bright and glorious. As if one rainbow were not enough of a display, a second reflection of color arched above it. The air was fresh and clear and the wind was cool carrying all the scents of parched grasses and flowers with it. I was as elated as a child to see such beauty above my head and thought of the Indian legend telling the secret of where the rainbow sleeps. It must have been told originally by some Indian grandfather to his grandchild as an explanation for, as any child knows, the rainbow must go somewhere when it is not busy painting the heavens.

In south-central Utah where the tall vermilion walls of the canyons and gorges blend with the splatters of orange and pink and white of shale, the rainbow sleeps. Here in this wilderness of cliffs and peaks with hundreds of miles of brilliant splendor and lonely silence, the rainbow finds solitude . . . at least according to legend.

I could never have thought of such an apt spot for the rainbow to sleep and it must have delighted the Indian children of the great Southwest to know the rainbow had chosen their homeland in which to slumber.

We, too, of the Great Plains know a certain pictorial beauty when the rainbow arches across our wide expanse of sky and land. Over the newly cut fields of wheat, the sculpted pattern of rows of stubble run to the horizon . . . curved slightly and shaped with lines soft with shadows.

Nearby the rows of soybeans hurry along to the nearest low-rolling ridge and fall over the downslopes in a pattern of green. Sometimes the winds are strong enough to make a rippling movement in the low-growing young plants. They tip and bow their crown of leaves as the wind blows.

Ah, it is like a moving, turbulent sea, rolling in green waves when the winds change direction in the fields of corn. The tassels become the creamy, foamy white-caps of the ocean and seem to come and go, back and forth with the blowing of the wind like the ebb and flow of the tides.

The Workers And Takers

Greenwood, Neb.

After reading some of the letters in "Today's Mail," I wonder why a woman who states she became pregnant by choice and wants no husband expects the rest of us to feed her and clothe her and pay all her bills. ADC for an unborn child! I'll say one thing -- she has a lot of nerve.

Every day I see these welfare and ADC mothers abusing a much needed service. It makes it very rough on those who actually need it. They have their doctor and dentist bills paid, new glasses -- you name it, they have it. But what about their neighbor who works every day paying taxes to feed and clothe and protect the needy ones? Take a look at his children. He can't afford to get their teeth fixed, he can't send them to the doctor; he is lucky they have enough to eat after taxes are all paid.

There is one young lady 17 years of age who works with us. Her teeth are so bad, she is in misery all the time. She has a bad appendix which gives her a terrible side-ache, but she uses her money to help out at home. She has one year of school left. She works during all her spare time and doesn't have time for a boyfriend, let alone getting pregnant and having one more mouth to feed.

Where are welfare and ADC? Well, they look the other way because these people are trying to make a living, with food and clothing and the necessities of life, without asking for help, while they feed those lazy mothers who want to play but don't want to pay.

Feed yourselves for a while, ladies, and if you have to work for a living, you won't have time to be out getting pregnant.

When Cities Go Broke

Lincoln, Neb.

New York City has gone broke. Just as an individual goes broke when he can no longer pay his bills, a city goes broke when it spends more than it earns. A city or an individual can continue to pass IOUs as long as people are willing to take them in payment for goods and services. When it becomes apparent to the vendors of goods and services that the IOUs can't be redeemed, that's the end. Some optimistic vendors may continue to accept the IOUs at less than face value.

When a country prints legal tender in the form of currency, it is actually printing IOUs. Inflation results when people lose confidence in the currency. Before a government goes under, it floods the system with an ever-increasing volume of currency. Like a man losing at poker. They double the bet on each hand. The other players frown on financing their opposition. If they try to get out of the game, the loser may pull a gun. When governments are involved, all-out war may result.

When the winds die down, the pattern becomes stable. The dark clouds form overhead and the wind changes its direction. The rain falls with soft staccato beats and a whispered hush turns the rustling leaves into obedient servants bowing in thankfulness.

The air becomes fresh and the slow, steady raindrops fall from the waxy leaves of corn. Some of the water is held in the whirls of corn, cold and clear as miniature springs.

There is a clearing in the dark clouds overhead and a patch of blue sky, like a freshly polished windowpane, shines through. Slowly the window in the sky opens wider as the clouds roll to the east and a rainbow begins to form. Slowly the colors become brighter blending so subtly from one color to another that one is not aware where one color stops and the next one begins.

The rainbow is one of nature's extravagances meant to lift the head of the weary upward and send the spirits soaring . . . a fantasy of color, a fantasy for dreaming.

If the rainbow sleeps in the canyons of Utah, it must surely have been created in the expanse of the wide-open sky and the plains of the great Midwest. I would like to think Nebraska holds the honor, for just as there is a wild peculiar virtue in the delicate music of an elusive bird, so is there a virtue in sighting the first artistic sweep of a colorful rainbow.

RONALD REAGAN

CALIFORNIA — The big news in the sky — the Soviet-American space docking — kept most eyes glued to television screens and gave Americans a warm glow of good feeling. Some events on the ground, however, were causing not so good feelings. For example:

Secretary of State Henry Kissinger had some harsh things to say about Aleksandr Solzhenitsyn. He described the Nobel laureate's views as "a threat to peace," apparently because Solzhenitsyn has been warning Americans to be wary of Soviet intentions in detente.

Kissinger said, "If I understand the message of Solzhenitsyn, it is that the United States should pursue an aggressive policy to overthrow the Soviet system." That, of course, is not Solzhenitsyn's message. The message is "detente without illusions," but Kissinger seems to have decided to misunderstand it.

Kissinger's own message at his news conference, on the other hand, seemed to be that we can listen to Solzhenitsyn talk about the lack of freedom in the Soviet Union, all right, so long as we don't take him very seriously, for he's only a writer, after all.

He told reporters he recommended that President Ford not see the Russian author, yet rumors were flying that the White House had tried without success to arrange a Ford-Solzhenitsyn meeting, presumably to make up for its previous rejection of the idea (and Press Secretary Ron

The Good News — And Otherwise

THE DETENTE ARCHIPELAGO

Nessen's implausible explanations) at the time Solzhenitsyn was in Washington to address a large AFL-CIO-hosted banquet.

Kissinger's defensiveness about the Solzhenitsyn matter appears to stem from concern over the fate of the delicate Strategic Arms Limitation Talks (SALT II) negotiations now under way.

If the final SALT II agreement

Solzhenitsyn warns that if detente is to work, at all, it must be on a quiet pro quo basis, for the Soviets understand firmness but will exploit any sign of weakness. This may seem a threatening view to Kissinger, who talks as if he believes that tiptoe diplomacy will be more effective with the Soviets.

As much tilted to Soviet advantage as the Vladivostok proposals, Solzhenitsyn's warning could turn out to have been prophetic.

While the Soyuz-Apollo crews were shaking hands in space and everyone was proclaiming enduring friendship on the ground, the Soviets continued their effort to subvert Portugal. In the last few weeks they have sent 60 new KGB agents to Lisbon and have spent 12 million (since April) on the Portuguese communists.

Their interference in the internal affairs of our erstwhile Atlantic Alliance ally seems to be paying off.

Portugal has slipped another notch toward a military-communist totalitarian government.

The two largest vote-getting parties in the spring election — the Socialists and the Popular Democrats (PPD) — quit the coalition government and took to the streets to protest the increasingly antidemocratic tendencies of the powerful Armed Forces Movement (AFM).

At first glance the protests seemed a hopeful sign, but the long-range outlook isn't good. Outside the government, the Socialists and the PPD will have an increasingly hard time functioning as organized political parties. And it takes organization to mount effective demonstrations.

The AFM, in fact, may choose to ignore the demonstrations until they evaporate. That's the way they handled the seizure of a Catholic church-owned radio station by a handful of leftist workers recently.

Protests. Demonstrations. Some backing and filling by the AFM. Outcome: the leftists still have the radio station.

All in all, the Kremlin must be smiling at recent events.

Meeting in Miami Beach, representatives of the International Longshoremen's Association voted, as expected, to refuse to load American grain aboard ships bound for the Soviet Union. They gave union officials power to lift the ban if certain conditions are met.

The union wants assurance, said ILA President Thomas W. Gleason, that American ships load at least one-third of the grain according to a U.S.-Russia maritime agreement. That assurance was given specifically by President Ford.

But that's not all. "The assurance I want is very simple," said Gleason simplistically. "We want to know what most people would agree that Lahmers was generous, probably properly so, in his interpretation.

But some further observations are in order:

—Some of the regents, apparently, still do not believe they violated the law, which indicates the need for continued vigorous watchdogging of the regents board (one of the most "closed" of the state's government bodies) on the public's behalf.

—The regents should have known what the law said. Certainly William Swanson, former state senator and corporation secretary of the board, who helped to draft some provisions of the law, should have been aware of what it required and advised the board in that regard. When asked by a Star reporter how he could not know that the June 21 meeting violated the law, Swanson said "no comment." Ignorance of the law is not a defense for most citizens.

—The publicity surrounding the regents' meeting and Lahmers' decision should instruct members of other government bodies that they should take out the law and read it and understand it if they have not done so already.

Hopefully because of this controversy, the intent of the open meeting law — that the public's business will be carried out in public — will be more closely observed.

effect this sale will have on the cost of living."

If everybody else demanded such "assurances" by threatening to lay down their tools, the production machinery of this nation would collapse in entirety. Among other things, this is an exercise in gross selfishness.

But labor's old man, AFL-CIO President George Meany, takes the cake. Meany is sounding more and more like he should be put out to pasture. A supporter of the longshoremen's ban, Meany told congressmen this week about the best way, in his opinion, to deal with the Soviet Union: "If they kick us in the shins, we kick them in the shins. It's the only thing they understand."

Since Meany was talking about Russians, there must be a whole lot of American grain farmers wondering why their shins ache. And it has made them bitter. Said one Nebraska wheat grower: "I think we ought to stuff the wheat down the longshoremen's throats."

Now, there is something maybe they understand.

City In A Hair Shirt

NEW YORK — Alone among American cities, New York revels in abuse. It has a positive liking for being told of its shortcomings, and even goes about boasting that it is far worse than outsiders suspect.

This is why Americans west of the Hudson and north of the Bronx are wasting their energies in criticizing New York for its present financial squallor.

Consider the "Fear City" campaign publicized by the New York policemen's and firemen's unions. It was the quintessential New York act. Imagine. In what other city on earth would the cops greet arriving tourists with printed broadsides boasting about what a rotten job they were doing?

Not in Chicago, surely. Chicago is a booster's town. It has the best police force in America, and you know who says so? Not just the Chicago police, but Mayor Daley. Himself.

During the 1968 political riots at the Democratic convention, Chicagoans stopped reporters on the streets urging them to report that Chicago was not like that, at all, at all. A great town, they insisted. Tell the world.

If the Chicago riots had happened in New York, do you believe New Yorkers would have been buttonholing men from the Tribune with pleas to tell the good folk of Chicagoland what a swell place New York really was, underneath all that untypical violence?

New Yorkers would have been standing among the cracked skulls saying, "This is nothing. Monday night stuff. You ought to be here on Saturday when things really get rough."

This is probably a perverse form of pride. It is the New Yorkers' way of showing the world they can take it.

To do this, of course, they have to exaggerate the trials of New York living. Thus, although the crime rate is considerably lower than in many other cities, they persist in the belief that it is the most crime-ridden city on earth and glory in reminiscences of getting through the door to home just one step ahead of the mugger.

LA Verna
HASSLER

One evening recently, late in the day when the sun was setting with a great burst of color in the West, we had a shower of rain. There was nothing unusual about the shower of rain, although we are in need of rain, but the rainbow that followed was one of the most beautiful I have ever seen.

It made a vivid arch of colors across the sky, pure and bright and glorious. As if one rainbow were not enough of a display, a second reflection of color arched above it. The air was fresh and clear and the wind was cool carrying all the scents of parched grasses and flowers with it. I was as elated as a child to see such beauty above my head and thought of the Indian legend telling the secret of where the rainbow sleeps. It must have been told originally by some Indian grandfather to his grandchild as an explanation for, as any child knows, the rainbow must go somewhere when it is not busy painting the heavens.

In south-central Utah where the tall vermilion walls of the canyons and gorges blend with the splatters of orange and pink and white of shale, the rainbow sleeps. Here in this wilderness of cliffs and peaks with hundreds of miles of brilliant splendor and lonely silence, the rainbow finds solitude . . . at least according to legend.

I could never have thought of such an apt spot for the rainbow to sleep and it must have delighted the Indian children of the great Southwest to know the rainbow had chosen their homeland in which to slumber.

We, too, of the Great Plains know a certain pictorial beauty when the rainbow arches across our wide expanse of sky and land. Over the newly cut fields of wheat, the sculpted pattern of rows of stubble run to the horizon . . . curved slightly and shaped with lines soft with shadows.

Nearby the rows of soybeans hurry along to the nearest low-rolling ridge and fall over the downslopes in a pattern of green. Sometimes the winds are strong enough to make a rippling movement in the low-growing young plants. They tip and bow their crown of leaves as the wind passes.

Ah, it is like a moving, turbulent sea, rolling in green waves when the winds change direction in the fields of corn. The tassels become the creamy, foamy white-caps of the ocean and seem to come and go, back and forth with the blowing of the wind like the ebb and flow of the tides.

When the winds die down, the pattern becomes stable. The dark clouds form overhead and the wind changes its direction. The rain falls with soft staccato beats and a whispered hush turns the rustling leaves into obedient servants bowing in thankfulness.

The air becomes fresh and the slow, steady raindrops fall from the waxy leaves of corn. Some of the water is held in the whirls of corn, cold and clear as miniature springs.

There is a clearing in the dark clouds overhead and a patch of blue sky, like a freshly polished windowpane, shines through. Slowly the window in the sky opens wider as the clouds roll to the east and a rainbow begins to form. Slowly the colors become brighter blending so subtly from one color to another that one is not aware where one color stops and the next one begins.

The rainbow is one of nature's extravagances meant to lift the head of the weary upward and send the spirits soaring . . . a fantasy of color, a fantasy for dreaming.

If the rainbow sleeps in the canyons of Utah, it must surely have been created in the expanse of the wide-open sky and the plains of the great Midwest. I would like to think Nebraska holds the honor, for just as there is a wild peculiar virtue in the delicate music of an elusive bird, so is there a virtue in sighting the first artistic sweep of a colorful rainbow.

The Workers And Takers

Greenwood, Neb.

After reading some of the letters in "Today's Mail," I wonder why a woman who states she became pregnant by choice and wants no husband expects the rest of us to feed her and clothe her and pay all her bills. ADC for an unborn child! I'll say one thing — she has a lot of nerve.

Every day I see these welfare and ADC mothers abusing a much needed service. It makes it very rough on those who actually need it. They have their doctor and dentist bills paid, new glasses — you name it, they have it. But what about their neighbor who works every day paying taxes to feed and clothe and protect the needy ones? Take a look at his children. He can't afford to get their teeth fixed, he can't send them to the doctor; he is lucky they have enough to eat after taxes are all paid.

There is one young lady 17 years of age who works with us. Her teeth are so bad, she is in misery all the time. She has a bad appendix which gives her a terrible side-ache, but she uses her money to help out at home. She has one year of school left. She works during all her spare time and doesn't have time for a boyfriend, let alone getting pregnant and having one more mouth to feed.

Where are welfare and ADC? Well, they look the other way because these people are trying to make a living, with food and clothing and the necessities of life, without asking for help, while they feed those lazy mothers who want to play but don't want to pay.

Feed yourselves for a while, ladies, and if you have to work for a living, you won't have time to be out getting pregnant.

When Cities Go Broke

Lincoln, Neb.

New York City has gone broke. Just as an individual goes broke when he can no longer pay his bills, a city or an individual can continue to pass IOUs as long as people are willing to take them in payment for goods and services. When it becomes apparent to the vendors of goods and services that the IOUs can't be redeemed, that's the end. Some optimistic vendors may continue to accept the IOUs at less than face value.

When a country prints legal tender in the form of currency, it is actually printing IOUs. Inflation results when people lose confidence in the currency. Before a government goes under, it floods the system with an ever-increasing volume of currency. Like a man losing at poker. They double the bet on each hand. The other players frown on financing their opposition. If they try to get out of the game, the loser may pull a gun. When governments are involved, all-out war may result.

CALIFORNIA — The big news in the sky — the Soviet-American space docking — kept most eyes glued to television screens and gave Americans a warm glow of good feeling. Some events on the ground, however, were causing not so good feelings. For example:

Secretary of State Henry Kissinger had some harsh things to say about Aleksandr Solzhenitsyn. He described the Nobel laureate's views as "a threat to peace," apparently because Solzhenitsyn has been warning Americans to be wary of Soviet intentions in detente.

Kissinger said, "If I understand the message of Solzhenitsyn, it is that the United States should pursue an aggressive policy to overthrow the Soviet system." That, of course, is not Solzhenitsyn's message. The message is "detente without illusions," but Kissinger seems to have decided to misunderstand it.

Kissinger's own message at his news conference, on the other hand, seemed to be that we can listen to Solzhenitsyn talk about the lack of freedom in the Soviet Union, all right, so long as we don't take him very seriously, for he's only a writer, after all.

He told reporters that President Ford not see the Russian author, yet rumors were flying that the White House had tried without success to arrange a Ford-Solzhenitsyn meeting, presumably to make up for its previous rejection of the idea (and Press Secretary Ron Nessen's implausible explanations) at the time Solzhenitsyn was in Washington to address a large AFL-CIO-hosted banquet.

Kissinger's defensiveness about the Solzhenitsyn matter appears to stem from concern over the fate of the delicate Strategic Arms Limitation Talks (SALT II) negotiations now underway.

If the final SALT II agreement

few weeks they have sent 60 new KGB agents to Lisbon and have spent 12 million (since April) on the Portuguese communists.

Their interference in the internal affairs of our erstwhile Atlantic Alliance ally seems to be paying off.

Portugal has slipped another notch toward a military-communist totalitarian government.

The two largest vote-getting parties in the spring election — the Socialists and the Popular Democrats (PPD) — quit the coalition government and took to the streets to protest the increasingly antidemocratic tendencies of the powerful Armed Forces Movement (AFM).

At first glance the protests seemed a hopeful sign, but the long-range outlook isn't good. Outside the government, the Socialists and the PPD will have an increasingly hard time functioning as organized political parties. And it takes organization to mount effective demonstrations.

The AFM, in fact, may choose to ignore the demonstrations until they evaporate. That's the way they handled the seizure of a Catholic church-owned radio station by a handful of leftist workers recently.

Protests. Demonstrations. Some backing and filling by the AFM. Outcome: the leftists still have the radio station.

All in all, the Kremlin must be smiling at recent events.

State Grain Stocks Below 1974 Levels

Nebraska feed grain stocks — corn, oats, barley and grain sorghum — in all positions totaled 3.5 million tons on July 1, the State-Federal Division of Agricultural Statistics reported Thursday.

This was 33% less than last year and the lowest feed grain stocks in Nebraska for this date since 1952, the bureau said.

Feed grains stored on farms were 30% below July 1, 1974, and accounted for 72% of total feed grain tonnage compared with 69% a year ago. Corn accounted for 83% of the total feed grain stocks compared with 79% last year.

Utilization of feed grains this past quarter at 2.9 million tons was down 50% from 1974, and the lowest since 1969.

Total stocks of corn in all positions in Nebraska totaled 102.7 million bushels, down 30% from last year, it was noted. Farm stocks declined 28% and off-farm stocks declined 36% from a year ago.

Sorghum stocks totaled 16.2 million bushels, less than half of last year's stocks. Oats stocks at 7.2 million bushels were 6% greater than last year. Barley stocks increased 48% over 1974.

Wheat stocks in Nebraska of 20.6 million bushels were 24% above last year, reflecting farmers' action in holding the grain to await increased prices, observers said. Off-farm stocks were 22% less than and farm stocks were 250% greater than July 1, 1974.

Total rye stocks at .2 million bushels were 52% below a year earlier. Stocks of soybeans totaled 13.5 million bushels compared with 10.9 million a year earlier.

Ford Stance On Bill Angers Legislators

By United Press International

Nebraskan politicians have registered objections to the White House decision to order the Agriculture Department to try and head off bills in Congress designed to protect livestock growers from loss when meat packers go broke.

Rep. Charles Thome, R-Neb., said Thursday he was disappointed in the "eleventh hour change of position concerning the reform of the Packers and Stockyards Act."

"Previously, Ag officials had assured me that they would give strong support to my proposed corrective legislation," Thome said.

Thome said he planned to discuss the legislation, which would accomplish the first reform in the act since its passage in 1921, with President Gerald Ford in an attempt to make sure Ford understands the importance of it.

Specifically, Thome said he would tell Ford the legislation is important because it would provide "protection against packers giving ranchers and farmers rubber checks," as happened in the American Beef case.

Rep. Virginia Smith, R-Neb., said she was also surprised at the last minute change.

"I am going to urge that the (agriculture) committee work toward some sort of compromise with the administration which will guarantee equity to our cattlemen," she said.

Fired Agent Will Appeal Liquor Board's Decision

Omaha (AP) — Norman Rollins, fired as chief enforcement officer of the Nebraska Liquor Control Commission earlier this month, will appeal the dismissal to the State Personnel Board, he said.

The former Omaha police man, who became the commission's chief law enforcement officer Jan. 1, 1974, was fired by the commission July 11.

The commission listed six charges against Rollins, including allegations that he refused to comply with an assignment from a supervisor and disregarded instructions from supervisors.

Rollins charged at a hearing on his dismissal that Commission Chairman EKD Robinson of Omaha had used on at least 26 occasions state vehicles and state employees for personal use.

Rollins declined to elaborate on the charge, saying his attorney had advised him against

Rollins was charged in the shooting death March 14 of Loren Bolte, 35, of rural Hastings, at the Hastings machine shop where they both were employed.

Braasch earlier this week entered a plea of innocent to a charge of first degree murder. The charge was changed to second degree murder Thursday by Adams County Atty. Art Toogood.

Kelly gave both sides 15 days to file additional briefs before acting further on the matter.

The city earlier this summer had filed a petition for a declaratory judgment, contending that the $3.50 was the figure set by state law for the county's charge for keeping city prisoners in the county jail.

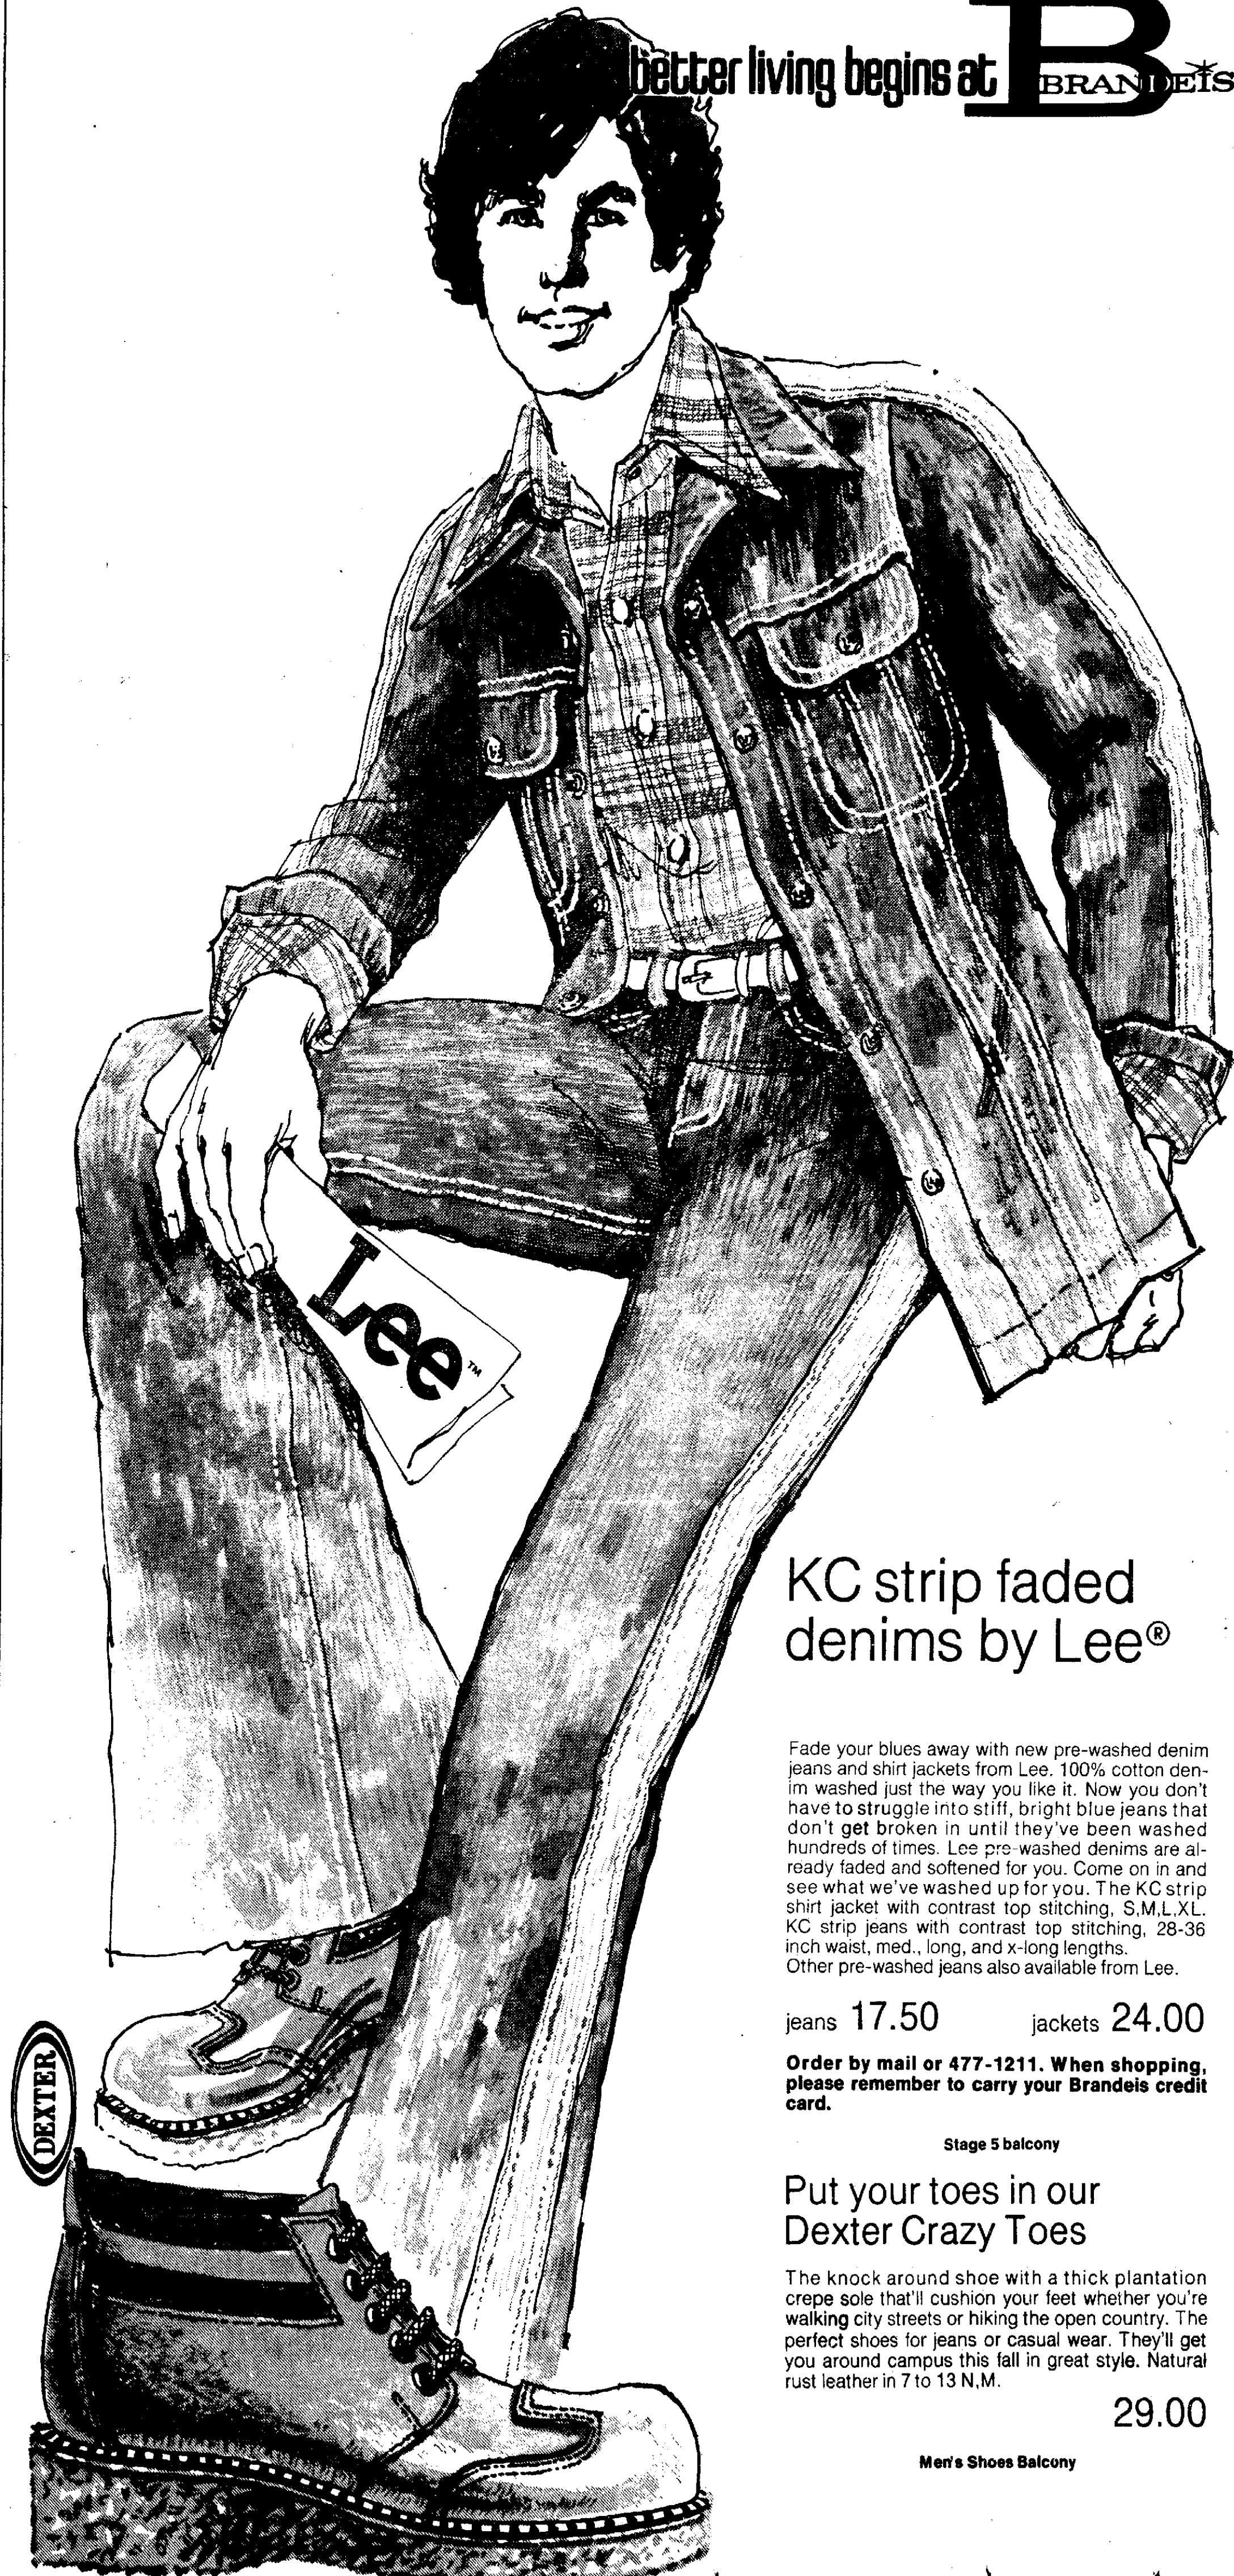

On behalf of the defendant, County Atty. Sam Grimminger argued that the law setting the $3.50 fee is unconstitutional.

City Atty. Earl Alschwede agreed that the controversy is not over the facts, but the matter of law. Alschwede did not disagree that the $3.50 is the reasonable figure for the actual expense of keeping the prisoners.

State Court Suspends Cook For Three Years

By BOB GENTHER

Star Staff Writer

G. Bradford Cook's plans to resume the practice of law in Washington, D.C., received a major setback Thursday.

The Nebraska Supreme Court went a step further than its special referee suggested and suspended Cook from the Nebraska Bar Association for three years for lying to a federal grand jury.

Cook, 37, has been an investment counselor in Washington, D.C., since his resignation as chairman of the federal Securities & Exchange Commission (SEC) in 1973.

Bar Important

He has voluntarily withdrawn from practicing pending Thursday's decision. Keeping his membership in the Nebraska Bar Association had been important to Cook, since he applied to the District of Columbia Bar for admission under a reciprocal agreement with Nebraska.

The court's action delays that for at least three years. Cook could not be reached for comment. He could ask the court for a rehearing.

Troubles began for Cook, son of a prominent Lincoln insurance man and a 1962 graduate of the University of Nebraska, when as chairman of the SEC he lied about conversations with Maurice Stans, a fund raiser for the 1972 Nixon campaign, concerning an SEC lawsuit against Vesco.

G. Bradford Cook

Illegal Gift

Vesco, a mutual funds financier under investigation for looting $250 million from Investors Overseas Services, had illegally given $250,000 to Nixon's campaign through Stans. Stans was concerned that references to the contribution might appear in the lawsuit against Vesco and publicly embarrass Nixon.

That subsequent testimony before congressional committees resulted in a complaint being filed against Cook with the Nebraska Bar.

John Kuns, a retired judge who acted as a referee during hearings, felt Cook's action merited a reprimand but not a suspension or disbarment.

The court, however, did not deal with one passage in Kuns' recommendation that has stirred controversy in the legal profession. That phrase indicated that lawyers cannot be expected to be truthful at all times whether under oath or not.

Under the suspension, Cook cannot even be a law clerk for the next three years and must prove he hasn't practiced law to get the suspension lifted.

The report, compiled for the city council, county commission and county-city building commission by Greathouse & Flanders, said that with the expected growth rate of the government offices and services, more than 82,000 square feet of space will be needed in the next 10 years that just aren't in the present building.

The study suggests buying or building another structure to house some of the government offices.

Some problems must be dealt with immediately, according to the study, while others can be worked out over the next five to 10 years.

The immediate problems, such as installing a stairwell connecting police offices on the first floor with those on the ground floor, can be easily solved according to Ross Greathouse, who compiled half of the data for the study.

The long range changes, however, are not so easily solved. The study suggests moving the county assessor, treasurer and clerk to another building, and finding another structure to house the data processing center for the next five to 10 years.

Greathouse said that remodeling the second floor to add a fourth municipal courtroom would also cause diffi-

Judge Upholds 2 Prison Terms Given Kartman

OMAHA (AP) — Federal Judge Robert Denney has upheld a prison term given earlier this year to G. Merrill Kartman, a former Omaha attorney.

In January, Douglas County District Judge Theodore Richling sentenced Kartman to two terms in the Nebraska Penal Complex for violation of probation.

He gave Kartman one year on one count and 1 to 10 years on a second count of probation violation.

Richling terminated the probation after Kartman was accused of drunken driving in Tulsa, Okla., and accused by Omaha probation officers of failing to demonstrate a bona fide attempt to rehabilitate himself.

TOPEKA, Kan. (AP) — The Republican administration of Gov. Robert F. Bennett assumed control of the Kansas Wheat Commission Thursday for the first time as Bennett appointed four new members to that agency.

The new members replace persons who had been appointed to the seven-member agency by former Democratic Gov. Robert Docking.

Bennett also announced an appointment to the Kansas Supreme Court nominating commission and one appointment and five reappointments to the Advisory Council to the State Board of Accountancy.

Appointed to the Wheat Commission, an agency which employs an administrator and oversees a budget in excess of $500,000 a year, were Harlan C. Weber, Wichita; Leonard M. Weddle, Minneola, Marvin W. Koch, Cawker City, and Floyd Friesbie, McDonald.

Woods Pool Proposal Hit

The proposed rental rate changes at Woods Pool were criticized at a public meeting of the Parks and Recreation Advisory Board Committee on Swimming Thursday night.

The Lincoln Swim Club, the Chamber of Commerce and Gateway Merchants had representatives who expressed concern that the proposed rate changes would hamper their efforts to bring swim meets to Lincoln.

The proposed changes are: limiting the use of Woods Pool by outside group to 12 days per year and charging $150 a day for the first four days; $250 a day for the next four days; and $500 a day for the final four days.

Groups at the meeting said such rates would put a strain on people trying to bring meets to the city. They also said that a limit of 12 days would eliminate bringing some of the longer, more prestigious meets.

The committee will meet in mid-August to decide on a recommendation to the parks board which is scheduled to meet Sept. 12.

Aide Criticizes Statement That Rocky Is 'Problem'

WASHINGTON (AP) — A member of President Ford's political advisory group Thursday criticized statements aimed at Vice President Nelson A. Rockefeller by Ford's campaign manager Howard (Bo) Callaway.

Press Secretary Ron Nessen quoted past presidential statements praising Rockefeller but saying each would pursue separate pre-convention campaigns, and added there was no indication Ford was displeased with Callaway.

"There is no desire on my part to have any kind of campaign against the vice president in any way," Callaway said, adding that he agreed to be quoted on the record because of his desire to have "a very open campaign."

"It's sort of a shame that, by talking frankly, this has been somehow taken as a difference of opinion, or a strategy on my part," he added.

Callaway said his conversations with Rockefeller were "friendly" and that "there are no cross-purposes between me and the vice president."

According to accounts of the interview published by the Washington Post and the Washington Star, Callaway said Reagan leads Ford in every Southern state and in California because of conservative opposition to Rockefeller.

"You and I both knew that if Rockefeller took himself out, it would help with the nomination" of the President, Callaway was quoted as saying.

State Court Suspends Cook For Three Years

By BOB GUNTHER

Star Staff Writer

G. Bradford Cook's plans to resume the practice of law in Washington, D.C., received a major setback Thursday.

The Nebraska Supreme Court went a step further than its special referee suggested and suspended Cook from the Nebraska Bar Association for three years for lying to a federal grand jury.

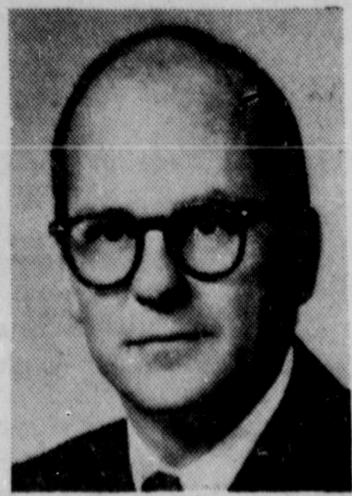

Cook, 37, has been an investment counselor in Washington, D.C., since his resignation as chairman of the federal Securities & Exchange Commission (SEC) in 1973.

Bar important

He has voluntarily withdrawn from practicing pending Thursday's decision. Keeping his membership in the Nebraska Bar Association had been important to Cook, since he applied to the District of Columbia Bar for admission under a reciprocal agreement with Nebraska.

The court's action delays that for at least three years. Cook could not be reached for comment. He could ask the court for a rehearing.

Troubles began for Cook, son of a prominent Lincoln insurance man and a 1962 graduate of the University of Nebraska, when as chairman of the SEC he lied about conversations with Maurice Stans, a fund raiser for the 1972 Nixon campaign, con-

Illegal Gift

Vesco, a mutual funds financier under investigation for looting $250 million from Investors Overseas Services, had illegally given $250,000 to Nixon's campaign through Stans. Stans was concerned that references to the contribution might appear in the lawsuit against Vesco and publicly embarrassed Nixon.

That subsequent testimony before congressional committees resulted in a complaint being filed against Cook with the Nebraska Bar.

John Kuns, a retired judge who acted as a referee during hearings, felt Cook's action merited a reprimand but not a suspension or disbarment.

New Structure May Be Needed To Ease City-County Squeeze

The problem of too many people and not enough space once again confronted city and county officials Thursday night when they heard the report from the planning firm on remodeling the county-city building.

The report, compiled for the city council, county commission and county-city building commission by Greathouse & Flanders, said that with the expected growth rate of the government offices and services, more than 82,000 square feet of space will be needed in the next 10 years that just aren't in the present building.

The study suggests buying or building another structure to house some of the government offices.

Some problems must be dealt with immediately, according to

Four Named To Join Kansas Wheat Panel

TOPEKA, Kan. (AP) — The Republican administration of Gov. Robert F. Bennett assumed control of the Kansas Wheat Commission Thursday for the first time as Bennett appointed four new members to that agency.

The new members replace persons who had been appointed to the seven-member agency by former Democratic Gov. Robert Docking.

Bennett also announced an appointment to the Kansas Supreme Court nominating commission and one appointment and five reappointments to the Advisory Council to the State Board of Accountancy.

Appointed to the Wheat Commission, an agency which employs an administrator and oversees a budget in excess of $500,000 a year, were Harlan C. Weber, Wichita; Leonard M. Weddle, Minneola; Marvin W. Koch, Cawker City, and Floyd Friesbie, McDonald.

Woods Pool Proposal Hit

The proposed rental rate changes at Woods Pool were criticized at a public meeting of the Parks and Recreation Advisory Board Committee on Swimming Thursday night.

The Lincoln Swim Club, the Chamber of Commerce and Gateway Merchants had representatives who expressed concern that the proposed rate changes would hamper their efforts to bring swim meets to Lincoln.

The proposed changes are: limiting the use of Woods Pool by outside groups to 12 days per year and charging $150 a day for the first four days; $250 a day for the next four days; and $500 a day for the final four days.

Groups at the meeting said such rates would put a strain on people trying to bring meets to the city. They also said that a limit of 12 days would eliminate bringing some of the longer, more prestigious meets.

The committee will meet in mid-August to decide on a recommendation to the parks board which is scheduled to meet Sept. 11.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A member of President Ford's political advisory group Thursday criticized statements aimed at Vice President Nelson A. Rockefeller by Ford's campaign manager Howard (Bo) Callaway.

"It seems to me that the most important thing now is to organize and not to disorganize," the adviser said after Callaway told a group of reporters that Rockefeller is "the No. 1 problem" in beating back Ronald Reagan's conservative challenge to Ford.

The adviser, who asked not to be identified, indicated that Callaway's anti-Rockefeller statements may be considered when the dozen-member advisory group holds its next meeting.

Meanwhile, the White House, Rockefeller and Callaway sought to downgrade any adverse impact from the campaign manager's statements, saying there had been no change in Ford's position on a 1976 running mate.

"There is no desire on my part to have any kind of campaign against the vice president in any way," Callaway said, adding that he agreed to be quoted on the record because of his desire to have "a very open campaign."

Regents To Hear Division Of Power Report

Friday, July 25, 1975 The Lincoln Star 7

The attorney for the University of Nebraska Regents will report Saturday on the constitutional division of power between the board and the Legislature.

Then, "possible action" is scheduled on the agenda to grant attorney Warren Johnson authority to file a declaratory judgment suit to delineate the regents' role and responsibilities.

The board will meet at 7 a.m. in Regents Hall, 3835 Holdrege, when the first item of business will be a "motion for a closed session to discuss sensitive personnel matters, salaries, labor negotiations and real estate transactions," according to the agenda.

At 9 a.m., the board will reconvene in open session, first holding two public hearings on Omaha campus parking and traffic rules, and a proposed baseball field. Then regents will tackle business affairs in the one-inch-thick agenda.

The regents in June directed Johnson to conduct legal research on the power dispute — centering around pay and merit increases — between them and the Legislature. However, that action was a last-minute addition to the agenda, and regents Saturday will ratify it, to insure compliance with the open meetings law.

Regents will reconsider a tabled resolution that orders compliance with LB610, a 1975 law which gives the NU System office greater responsibility in managing and administering the university. Some administrators have said privately that dilutes campus chancellors' authority.

The resolution, introduced by Scottsbluff Regent Robert Simmons, also calls for possible revision of the bylaws specifying subordinate rules for campus-level governance.

The board's athletic ticket policy committee, headed by vice chairman Robert Prokop of Wilber, will report its findings in investigating the NU practice of awarding free football tickets to public and elected officials, private companies, and individuals, news media executives, former players and others.

The business affairs committee will recommend approval of the NU operating budget for the fiscal year beginning July 1. The total budget for all programs is $194.6 million, including $77 million in state general fund appropriations.

The totals compare with $149.9 million and $63.8 million during 1974-75.

New budgets in certain programs — such as administration, plant operations, stores and services, and federal grants — are temporary. Those funds had previously been appropriated directly to campuses, but LB610 put them under the NU central office control.

Thus, temporary allotments based on past budget experience have been made, according to William C. Erskine, NU executive vice president. And after an administrative review, regents may be asked to approve changes in September. They will not meet in August.

Regents in June approved salaries for NU employees according to state guidelines (raises of 5% plus $468), but a progress report is set Saturday on campus merit increases.

Lincoln Chancellor James Zumberge will recommend 165 staff members receive salary increases for "promotion and extraordinary merit for 1975-76." The regents last month voted such funds could not exceed one-half of 1% of the total salary budget.

The proposed pay increases range from $500 to $611 in virtually all cases. A few exceptions are as low as $389, with the two highs at $1,500 and $2,000.

In other UNL business items, regents will consider accepting $98,012 in bids by American Sterilizer Corp. for sterilizers in the Animal Research, Veterinary Diagnostic and Life Science Buildings; $69,064 proposed by INCOS Corp. for a chemistry department data system; and authorizing installation of 14 fire escapes, 18 fire doors and safety glass in the Neihardt Residence Center for an estimated $65,000.

For UNO, regents will consider merging the journalism and speech departments into the Department of Communication. Chancellor Ronald Roekens will recommend adopting student fee allocations of $182,000, an increase of $15,000 but $27,450 less than was requested.

In action for the NU Medical Center at Omaha, Chancellor Robert Sparks, M.D., will ask regents to adjust the tuition refund schedule and accept a proposed $48,000 contract to continue furnishing services in a two-way closed-circuit TV network in the Nebraska Area Veterans Administration Hospitals.

University of Nebraska-Lincoln Chancellor James Zumberge will recommend the NU Regents appoint Adam C. Breckenridge as vice chancellor for academic affairs, effective Aug. 1.

The board will consider the nomination at a 9 a.m. meeting Saturday in Regents Hall, 3835 Holdrege.

A search committee has been working since June 8, 1974, to fill the vacancy.

A Turney, Mo., native, Breckenridge joined the NU staff in 1946 and became political science department chairman in 1963. He was named dean of faculties in 1955.

He became vice chancellor for academic affairs in 1962 and was named vice chancellor for international programs in 1966. Breckenridge continued in that post until 1968 when he returned to teaching and research.

In 1973-74, he served as acting director of libraries.

Breckenridge holds a bachelors degree from Northwest Missouri State College, a masters from Missouri University, and a doctorate in politics from Princeton University.

A specialist in public policy and public law, he is author or co-author of six books and numerous articles in professional journals. His most recent book, "The Executive Privilege," was published in 1974.

Breckenridge currently serves as a member of State Department of Economic Development's advisory committee on goals for Nebraska, the Human Service Advisory Committee to Lincoln and Lancaster County, and the American Political Science Association's Committee on Professional Ethics and Academic Freedom.

He is a past member of the Lincoln-Lancaster County Planning Committee and past chairman of the Lincoln Zoning Board of Appeals. Breckenridge has also served as consultant to state and local government officials and agencies.

Quasar makes a color TV that's easy on the eyes...
"Super Insta-Matic" Color Tuning is an electronic device that works much like a light meter, adjusting constantly to normal changes in room lighting. The result is a picture comfortable to watch under many changing light conditions. When you're watching Quasar Color TV in a brighter-than-normal room,
"Super Insta-Matic" Color Tuning with the Electronic Light Sensor adjusts automatically. Delivers a vivid balance of brightness, contrasts, and intensity. When the room lighting gets darker, "Super Insta-Matic" Tuning automatically softens this balance. Benefit? A picture that's comfortable to

At 19, He's Part Owner Of Take-Out Fish Place

By PATTY BEUTLER

Star Staff Writer

If you think there's something fishy about

Jim Anderson, you're right

But that's no character defamation. In fact it's a compliment of sorts for this young entrepreneur

At 19, he's part owner and manager of Mr. J's Fish Place, 2047 R

But that's the glamorous side. He's also cook, cashier and handyman

Worked For Others

For almost eight years Jim has had part-time jobs working for others. He's sold wholesale wigs and door-to-door products

Now he's his own boss and the one thing he's found out for sure is that he's hardly in fat city. His workday starts at 9 a.m. and he doesn't close up shop until midnight. And that's his schedule seven days a week.

But it's going to be worth it, Jim figures, in the long run. "I've had a positive attitude about this and I still do," he stressed Lincoln's only carryout fish place has plenty of potential, he's convinced.

3-Way Partnership

To see his dream come true Jim had to find himself some backers. He finally convinced his aunt, Lenore Lintz, and his mother, Vivian Anderson, to climb aboard. A three-way partnership was formed.

But there were lessons to be learned by these business novices.

Remodeling and equipping for the restaurant business what had been a bicycle repair shop took five times more than the $2,000 Jim had expected he'd need.

And shopping around for the best prices wasn't much fun either. Anxious to get the shop open, Jim was often tempted to opt for the first offer instead of hunting for the cheapest. But he held off.

Then there were mistakes to learn by. On the opening day Jim ran through 100 pounds of fish and realized only $40 profit. What he discovered too late was that "we were giving too big portions."

There were other first-time experiences for this young businessman like doing his own interior decorating and wallpaper hanging.

Bright Colors

He chose sunshine yellow wallpaper and curtains because "most restaurants are dark."

But one thing Jim's an old hand at is cooking. Both his aunt and mother have been professional cooks at Lancaster Manor for many years.

"It's something I've picked up," Jim says with a trace of modesty. "I'm not saying I'm talented, but it's something I do real well."

Right now he's serving up deep-fried carp. Buffalo and catfish will be added to the menu later. He gets all his fresh water fish from Omaha, but it's raised on Minnesota farms.

Hasn't Gone To Head

Being his own boss hasn't gone to his head at all, Jim assures. "I still run around in blue jeans all the time."

Jim believes that people don't change when they become their own boss.

Although he's confident of success, he's cautious in his attitude. "It can be taken away as fast as I received it."

OLD HAND AT COOKING . . . Jim does it 'real well.'

Pot, Pornographic Films To Be Used In Research

Carbondale, Ill. (UPI) — A group of male volunteers this fall will start watching pornographic films and smoking marijuana in a Southern Illinois University testing center to determine the drug's effect on sexual response.

The two-year federally funded research project will be directed by Harris B. Rubin, 43, a psychologist and associate professor in the SIU School of Medicine.

Rubin said the tests will represent the first objective research of its kind.

The pot will be supplied by the federal government and the films will come from legitimate sources, Rubin said. The volunteers will watch the films both during periods when they are smoking marijuana and not smoking it.

He expects some 60 volunteers, all 21 or over and including students and non-students who have been carefully screened and tested physically and psychologically, will participate in the study the first year.

"How many we use the second year depends on what the first year results are," Rubin said.

All the volunteers will be experienced marijuana smokers except one — Rubin.

Rubin, who said he never has tried the weed, said he will take the tests first "to be sure there are no bugs" in the testing equipment which will measure penis erection, respiration, heart beat and blood pressure.

The research also will measure the effect of marijuana smoking on sex hormones, Rubin said.

The research is expected to cost some $110,000 and will be funded by the National Institute of Drug Abuse. About $62,000 already has been made available for the first year of the study. "Doctors will administer the marijuana in varying dosages and the volunteers will be tested individually, with one subject not knowing the identity of the others," Rubin said.

What's more, the volunteers will probably average about $10 a day for undergoing the tests.

dear abby

Yes, You Should Wear Padded Bra

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 14-year-old girl. My problem is that I am flat and most boys go for built-up chicks. I know you are going to say 'Wear padded bras,' but where will that get me?

Please be a friend and put your answer in the paper. There must be at least a million girls with my problem.

FLAT

DEAR FLAT: You are a very wise girl to wonder how creams could put inches on you. They can't. Be patient. And I AM going to tell you to wear a padded bra. At least you will look better in clothes.

DEAR ABBY: My daughter-in-law runs her house without any schedule or system. She is 31 and so is her husband. Their children are 2 and 4.

They eat when they're hungry and go to sleep when they're tired.

I told them nicely that they should get on some kind of schedule, but they paid no attention to me. I also sent them a book on basic child care and nutrition, but I haven't seen any signs of their having read it.

She puts off the housekeeping chores that almost every homemaker does routinely. She just plays with the children and dresses them like dolls, forgetting that balanced meals and a set routine are important to good health.

Please tell me what to do. My nerves get shot every time I go over there and see what is going on.

MOTHER-IN-LAW

DEAR MOTHER-IN-LAW: Be kind to yourself, and don't go over there so often if it upsets you. If your son isn't aware that his wife needs straightening out, let it go. You've done all you can.

DAR ABBY: Thanks for the exchange on fancy church weddings for young couples who have been living together.

You're right; it is in poor taste and an unnecessary expense to parents.

It is also a rip-off of the guests invited to the shindig, since they are supposed to show up with gifts in hand to avoid rupturing family and friend relationships.

I don't care if young people want to kick over my traditions, but I think they ought to try to live with the consequences.

The traditional wedding, and the party after it, has always symbolized a new beginning for a new family. So, if the family began two years ago, why throw a party now? And why ask friends to furnish the house?

TIRED OF THE RIP-OFF

DEAR TIRED: Those who feel as you do (and there are many) should decline invitations to such weddings and feel no obligation to send a gift.

Everyone has a problem.

What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

For Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding," send $1 to Abigail Van Buren, 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212. Please enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped (20c) envelope.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 14-year-old girl. My problem is that I am flat, and most boys go for built-up chicks. I know you are going to say, "Wear padded bras," but where will that get me?

I eat everything that is good for me. Fresh fruit, and vegetables, and milk, but it all goes to my stomach, thighs and butt.

I am always cut down because I'm flat. I have to wear children's clothes because I have a 30 AA bust and my hips are 31 1/2. I am 5'1" and weigh 95 pounds.

I see stuff advertised in magazines, but I haven't sent for any because, in the first place, I don't see how creams can put inches on your bust, and, in the second, my Mom opens all the mail. She would kill me if she knew I was even thinking about anything like that.

Please be a friend and put your answer in the paper. There must be at least a million girls with my problem.

Saddle Won't Fit Motorcycle

By CYNTHIA JOHNSON
Star Staff Writer

Any person who gets up long before sunrise in order to ride his horse to work has got to have a reason.

If that person's employer happens to be the Kawasaki Motor Corp., he's got to have more than a reason. He needs a sense of humor.

Malcolm resident Gerry Smith has both.

Early this spring, Smith began riding his horse — a five-year-old quarter horse gelding named Cowboy's Scat — to and from work at Kawasaki. And, despite good-natured ribbing from his co-workers, Smith still maintains that four legs, a mane and a tail are preferable to two wheels, a motor and handlebars.

'Kind Of Funny'

"I suppose it seems kind of funny for a guy who works at Kawasaki to ride his horse to work," said Smith one afternoon as he saddled Scat in preparation for the ride home.

"But I don't like to ride motorcycles," he continued with a grin.

At least twice a week, Smith makes the 18-mile round trip between home and work on horseback.

During the time his rider is at work, Scat is stabled at the Earl England farm adjacent to the Lincoln Kawasaki plant.

Plenty Of Time

In order to make it to work by 7 a.m., Smith is saddled up and ready to leave home at 4:30 a.m. When he and Scat arrive at the England farm, Smith has plenty of time to give Scat his breakfast and "drink a couple of cups of coffee" before reporting for work.

Although Smith is the first to point out the humorous side of his job transportation system, he is serious about its real intent.

A long-time horseman and professional horseshoer, Smith recently began participating in competitive, long-distance trail rides. And he began riding Scat to work to condition him for a 50-mile ride held this spring in Muskogee, Okla.

Apparently Smith's efforts paid off. Scat received the trophy for being the "best-conditioned quarter horse," and he tied for first place in the overall ride.

At the present time, Smith is conditioning for an 80-mile, two-day ride which will take place later this month in Lander, Wyo.

Conditioning Vital

A well-conditioned mount is of utmost importance to a competitive trail rider.

And that means daily conditioning workouts prior to the ride.

Smith — who is a member of the Nebraska Endurance and Competitive Trail Rides Association — likes "to put between 75 and 100 miles on him (Scat) per week" just before a trail ride.

Walk And Trot

Most of his conditioning rides — including those to and from work — are done at a walk and trot.

Trotting is the best gait to build up a horse's muscles, Smith said. And he canters occasionally to built up Scat's wind.

Looking at it from Scat's point of view, Smith said he thinks his horse enjoys trail work "more than he does the show ring. This (trail riding) is more of what a horse is capable of doing."

But Scat isn't the only one who enjoys the rides. Smith said he especially likes the early morning trips to work.

Quiet Before Dawn

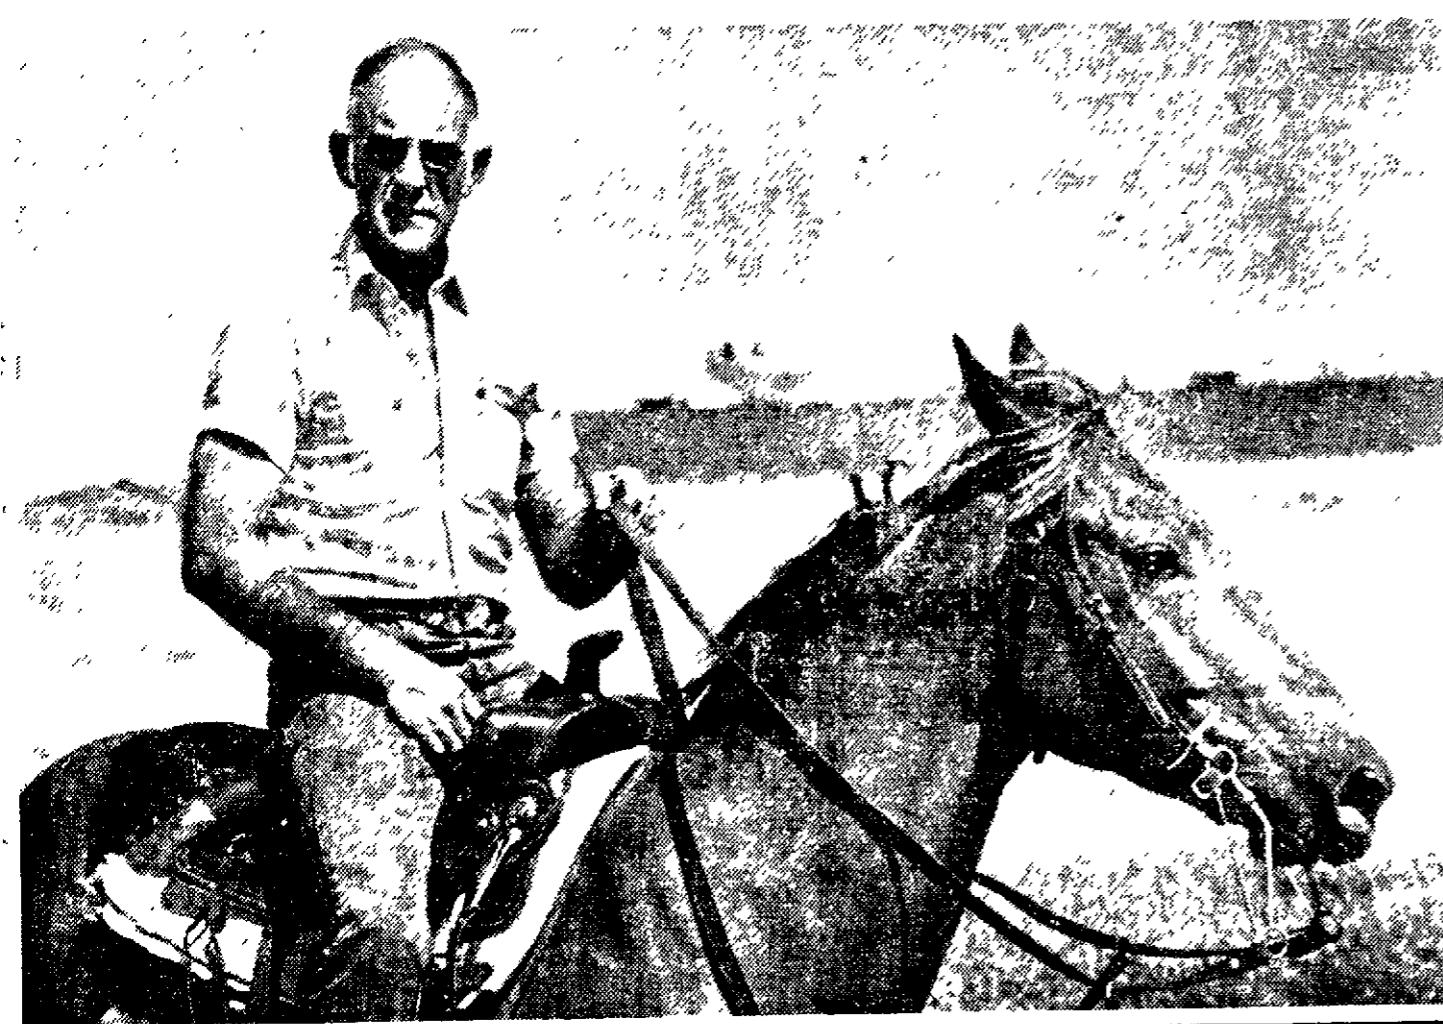

"It's so peaceful," he said. "There's no one around." No cars, no people, no hurry. Only the clip-clop rhythm of Scat's hooves breaking the pre-dawn stillness.

Two-wheeled, motorized marvels are fine for some. But not for Gerry Smith.

"My saddle won't fit on a motorcycle," he said.

SADDLING UP . . .
for nine-mile ride home.

ON HORSEBACK . . .
and on the way home.

Saddle Won't Fit Motorcycle

By CYNTHIA JOHNSON

Star Staff Writer

Any person who gets up long before sunrise in order to ride his horse to work has got to have a reason.

If that person's employer happens to be the Kawasaki Motor Corp., he's got to have more than a reason. He needs a sense of humor.

Malcolm resident Gerry Smith has both.

Early this spring, Smith began riding his horse — a five-year-old quarter horse gelding named Cowboy's Scat — to and from work at Kawasaki. And, despite good-natured ribbing from his co-workers, Smith still maintains that four legs, a mane and a tail are preferable to two wheels, a motor and handlebars.

Kind Of Funny

"I suppose it seems kind of funny for a guy who works at Kawasaki to ride his horse to work," said Smith one afternoon as he saddled Scat in preparation for the ride home.

"But I don't like to ride motorcycles," he continued with a grin.

At least twice a week, Smith makes the 18-mile round trip between home and work on horseback.

During the time his rider is at work, Scat is stabled at the Earl England farm adjacent to the Lincoln Kawasaki plant.

Plenty Of Time

In order to make it to work by 7 a.m., Smith is saddled up and ready to leave home at 4:30 a.m. When he and Scat arrive at the England farm, Smith has plenty of time to give Scat his breakfast and "drink a couple of cups of coffee" before reporting for work.

Although Smith is the first to point out the humorous side of his job transportation system, he is serious about its real intent.

A long-time horseman and professional horseshoer, Smith recently began participating in competitive, long-distance trail rides. And he began riding Scat to work to condition him for a 50-mile ride held this spring in Muskogee, Okla.

Apparently Smith's efforts paid off. Scat received the trophy for being the "best-conditioned quarter horse," and he tied for first place in the overall ride.

At the present time, Smith is conditioning for an 80-mile, two-day ride which will take place later this month in Lander, Wyo.

Conditioning Vital

A well-conditioned mount is of utmost importance to a competitive trail rider.

And that means daily conditioning workouts prior to the ride.

Smith — who is a member of the Nebraska Endurance and Competitive Trail Rides Association — likes "to put between 75 and 100 miles on him (Scat) per week" just before a trail ride.

Walk And Trot

Most of his conditioning rides — including those to and from work — are done at a walk and trot.

Trotting is the best gait to build up a horse's muscles, Smith said. And he canters occasionally to built up Scat's wind.

Looking at it from Scat's point of view, Smith said he thinks his horse enjoys trail work "more than he does the show ring. This (trail riding) is more of what a horse is capable of doing."

But Scat isn't the only one who enjoys the rides. Smith said he especially likes the early morning trips to work.

Quiet Before Dawn

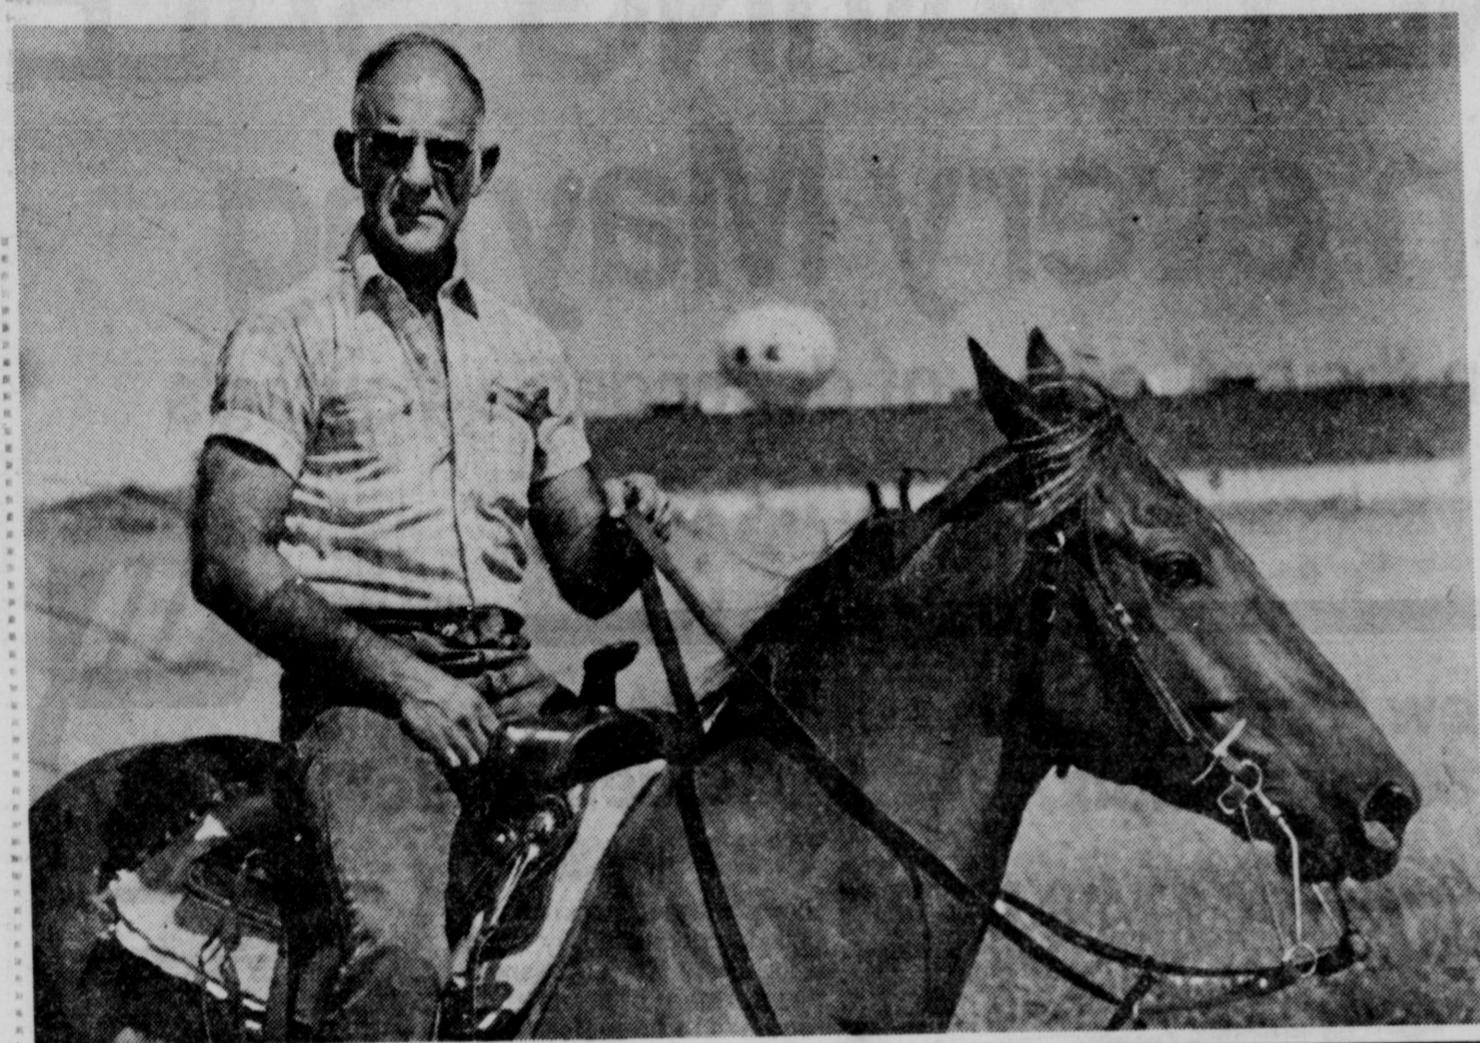

"It's so peaceful," he said. "There's no one around." No cars, no people, no hurry. Only the clip-clop rhythm of Scat's hooves breaking the pre-dawn stillness.

Two-wheeled, motorized marvels are fine for some. But not for Gerry Smith.

"My saddle won't fit on a motorcycle," he said.

SADDLING UP . . .
for nine-mile ride home.

ON HORSEBACK . . .
and on the way home.

London — You don't think of England as a gambling country. But so it is. Bingo Clubs (with a modest entrance fee) have had a tremendous upswing in the last few years.

It is played largely by housewives in the afternoon. And one of the biggest chains of Bingo clubs was run by the Rank Organization which found Bingo more profitable than movies in their theater chain.

Bingo turnover went to a total of $2 billion.

Horse racing went up double that. But it only totaled half as much.

The beloved football pools — you can win a million by betting 14 cents — were down $30 million.

The sun sets late these summer evenings on the Empire the sun never sets on. About 10 o'clock — far north and daylight saving.

The smartest thing to do at evening is to play chemin de fer. A sort of loose-jointed card game. It is played in smart, private clubs — a stiff membership fee and as high as $120 to the house just to sit in.

Casino gambling was legalized in 1960. And this morning it was attacked by the Churches Council on Gambling. They then put a meager OK on Bingo.

"Chemmy" gambling is far

The company bought 10 Ford and Chevrolet 12-passenger vans and uses them to haul employees to and from work. In the first year, Conoco officials estimate the 10 vans will save 52,000 gallons of gasoline and take 50 cars off Houston's already crowded expressways.

"And I think it's safe to say that's just a beginning," says William R. Fortune, Director of Conoco's Special Service Department, who coordinates the program. "It's only been in operation since March and it's grown from 30 employees to more than 100. We've got a waiting list for when we add more vans."

Fortune explained the program to officials of 40 of Houston's biggest employers and at least three of them indicated they intend to follow Conoco's lead in Texas. He has recommended to his own company that it buy and operate as many vans as necessary to serve all employees who want to ride them.

The 12-seat vans — equipped with air conditioning, power steering and brakes — have proved safer and more dependable than private cars in some situations.

"We found out during the recent floods that these vans are real water hogs," Fortune said. "All our van poolers got to and from work, while some other employees didn't."

Under the program, Conoco buys the vans and charges riders just enough to amortize their cost over a 4-year period, based on 8-passenger occupancy. The van drivers, also regular Conoco employees, get to pocket the fares of each additional rider. The drivers also can keep the vans at their homes and use them for personal purposes.

As one van driver explains: "I couldn't care less about the extra income from fares. I was faced with buying a third car, and it was getting pretty tight when this deal came along. That was my incentive for wanting to be one of the drivers."

Conoco got the idea from 3M Company in Minneapolis, which now operates 63 vans and has seven more on order.

"The Minnesota Energy Agency sent two representatives to the Houston meeting to pick up ideas on how to further popularize the program in that state," Fortune said.

Ken R. Gerhart, Conoco Energy Conservation Director said some riders in the van pool estimate they are saving themselves up to $150 per month in payments for cars they had intended to buy before the program was started.

Conoco foots the bill for administrative costs which are fairly low at the present because Fortune does most of the work.

"It gives me a few headaches, but when you compare them with what the program could save in fuel if it went into general use, those headaches are minor."

"FEA studies indicate that about one-third of all gasoline consumed in the U.S. is in commuting to work and the average number of people in each vehicle is only 1.3. If this could be raised nationally by just one more person per vehicle to 2.3, it would result in a daily savings of 700,000 barrels of fuel," says a booklet prepared by Conoco.

Wetzler contends those actions are why Miller ordered him to take the tests. Miller contends he ordered him to take the tests

Police Officer Begins Tests As Ordered By Department

A police officer placed on sick leave last week and ordered to take physical and mental tests began those tests Thursday.

Capt. John Miller said the officer, Stuart Wetzler, 31, of 3530 N. 14th, informed him that the tests may take a week or longer.

Miller said he agreed to the psychiatrist selected by Wetzler. The psychiatrist will work with a physician and perhaps other doctors, Miller said. The department had said Wetzler could take the tests without personal expense at the Lincoln-Lancaster County Health Department.

Trail Riders Reach Chimney Rock

(EDITORS NOTE: The Lincoln Star is among the sponsors of the Oregon Trail Riders, seven Nebraskans who are retracing on horseback the 2,000-mile Oregon Trail that opened the west. Allen Maybee, group leader, is doing the drawings and Cher Hummel, another member, is writing the reports.)

By CHER HUMMEL

There is no place like home. As soon as the range of hills to the north became visible, our spirits rose.

To the early pioneers, Chimney Rock was a significant milestone. But to us it meant much more. Seeing it as a familiar landmark took nothing away from its splendor. Our eyes were searching for its silhouette many miles before it appeared on the horizon. To us it meant seeing old friends, familiar faces, familiar country.

Riding into the valley, our group grew larger. We picked up Joan and Jana Jeary, sisters of rider Jean Jeary, and Candy Quinn, 13-year-old sister of Jim Quinn, who met us in Lewellen and rode with us to Scottsbluff.

Our group must have appeared very large strung out along the road. One tourist heard from an observer that there were 20 people on horseback.

In Scottsbluff we were introduced to Patrick Ryan. This contemporary pioneer's story is similar to ours. He too is traveling the Oregon Trail.

Patrick is from Rochester, N.Y. He and his paint mare Tana began traveling last May in Kansas. Patrick's trail story is distinct from ours — a slower pace, different goals and experiences.

But he becomes a traveling companion, and we share the next westward miles together.

Bridgeport was an important stop. Here the riders met Paul and Helen Henderson. Using a slide show, they took the group 400 miles further into Wyoming, a preview of the next three weeks.

Wyoming country is dramatically different from the land we've just traveled. The story of the trail will undoubtedly change.

At the next stop in McGraw, the trail riders were the guests of Harmon, who has her own bicentennial project. Her goal is to light 200 candles on a cake for each of 200 travelers whom she hopes to meet in McGraw. She and her friends hosted the riders to a chicken dinner feast at the site of the old pony express station.

On Thursday nine riders were heading west, approaching Gering. At mid-morning, a lone milk truck approached them. Since they had left camp before sunup, these nine desperados seized the situation. Thirstily they hailed down the truck on the lonely road.

As the truck stopped, nine horsemen surrounded the scene. However, western hospitality disarmed them, and their thirst was quenched with fresh cold milk and ice cream.

The trail ride came home to Gering under a hot July sun with a festive Oregon Trail Day welcome. We followed the trail through Mitchell Pass, stopping at the monument to be formally welcomed by dignitaries of the Scottsbluff-Gering area and to receive the official bicentennial medal.

When riding toward Dome Rock and the Bluff, not much is left to the imagination. The scene is very much like that of 100 years ago — the fine chalky white dust, dry grasslands, yucca and cactus. Passing through Mitchell Pass not only marked the arrival home, but also brought us over the 600-mile mark.

We experienced another first on Friday when we became part of the Oregon Trail Days Parade. The arrival for these festivities was unplanned, but it will be

The horses handled their first parade as if they enjoyed the change of pace. After a day of seeing old friends and well-wishers it was hard to hit the trail again.

The amphitheater at the monument was the setting for the Oregon Trail Riders program. The best part was the number of people who showed their interest in the ride by attending. The warmth of our home town assured us that our project is of some significance.

The last evening before resuming the ride, we were honored by a visit from Ben, Delores and Meredith Kills In Water and Annie Douville. Their friendship and interest in the ride brought them to our home camp. During the visit they presented us with gifts of beautiful Indian jewelry and beadwork which we will carry with us to Oregon.

Treatment Offered For Malpractice Insurance Woes

While he didn't promise a cure-all, Dr. Milton W. Mays prescribed a three-dose treatment for malpractice insurance woes.

The insurance executive said Thursday the "ultimate solution" to skyrocketing malpractice insurance rates includes, for one, some limit on damages awarded to the person filing the suit and the portion of the award taken by his lawyer.

Secondly, he said, courts should allow the records of arbitration boards and medical peer reviews to be admitted as evidence in malpractice cases.

And finally, insurers must be authorized to charge adequate rates to cover their malpractice exposure, he said.

Dr. Mays, vice chairman of Continental Corp. and the Continental Insurance Companies, said joint underwriting systems to write medical malpractice coverage "are no solution at all."

Statutes setting up joint underwriting associations mandate that a company participate and that it shares in losses. At the same time, companies have "very little control" over their exposure and no control over rates, he said. "We have to sit there and take our medicine."

In addition, he said, insurance firms and the public are "subject to the whims of the jury" in malpractice cases.

In one New York case, he cited a young woman accepted the offer of a $185,000 award while her case was still being deliberated by the jury. Later, after they were told their work was done, the jurors revealed they had decided on a $900,000 award.

With such a wide discrepancy in settlements, "you know something has to be wrong," he said.

"Another ugly fact," Dr. Mays said, "is that the American public has been getting some shoddy medical service."

He had decided on a $900,000 award.

In Massachusetts, for example, Continental dropped its rates 20% to 25% the first year, he said, and another 12% the next year.

Sentiment is building within the insurance industry in favor of the proposed Senate no-fault legislation, he said, partly in light of the fact that many states have passed "phony" no-fault laws — where accident coverage is superimposed on a liability policy.

Dr. Mays of New York City, spoke Thursday at a luncheon sponsored by Woodmen Accident and Life Co. of Lincoln as part of the company's 85th anniversary observance.

Council Rejects Bobby Vinton St.

CANONSBURG, Pa. (AP) — Singer Bobby Vinton won't have a street in this small western Pennsylvania town named after him.

When the City Council announced plans to rename Smith Street in honor of Vinton, a native son, residents raised such a furor that the council had to back down.

"We're the ones who have to live here," said Dolly Miller, who remembers Vinton, now 39, as "the little kid" on the block. "I haven't seen Bobby around here in years."

Court Upholds Decision In Purse-Snatching Case

By The Associated Press

The Nebraska Supreme Court Thursday upheld the first degree murder conviction of a purse snatcher whose victim eventually died.

Abe Clark Lytle, 17 at the time of the Oct. 28, 1973 crime, was convicted by the Douglas County District Court and William Basler by the Lancaster County District Court. The Supreme Court reversed a Scotts Bluff County District Court decision which said Loy and Marian Randall did not have an option to purchase real estate from Lydia Erdman. The High Court said they did have the option.

Lytle claimed that she died because of complications arising from surgery and not actually because of the broken hip. A unanimous Supreme Court disagreed, saying that the purse snatching attempt was the proximate cause of her death. The High Court upheld the Dakota County District Court rape conviction of Jesse James Ford. He contended his sentence of 15 to 25 years was excessive.

The court upheld the burglary convictions of James Huskey by the Douglas County District Court and William Basler by the Lancaster County District Court.

SeTech Board Sets Hearing On $5.67 Million Budget

A public hearing on the $5.67 million budget — including new local taxation authority — of the Southeast Nebraska Technical Community College will begin at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday.

Immediately following the hearing, in the Lincoln campus Bryan Center, 1701 S. 40th, the college area board will adopt the budget in a special meeting.

The board a week ago agreed to levy a 2.35-mill property tax on residents in the 15-county area; 1.35 mills would generate funds for 1975-76 operations and 1 mill for construction.

The combined assessed millage is less than the 2.5 mills allowed by LB344, the 1975 law reorganizing the technical community college system and its financing.

Each mill will produce about $1.3 million, according to College President Robert S. Eicher.

As proposed, the $5,675,781 budget represents a 17.3% increase over last year's grant total of $4.8 million. Even with an additional $40,000 in tax funds included to help pay for expanded occupation-oriented workshops in 22 communities, Eicher said the new budget is still under the Legislative Fiscal Analyst's recommendation by about $600,000.

The budget calls for increases of 7.7% for the Fairbury campus, to $619,190, 15.3% for Milford, to $2,294,861, 13.8% for Lincoln, to $2,104,922, and 54.8% for area office operations, to $656,808.

The state general fund will provide about $2.85 million.

By levying less than the maximum local millage, the college will incur a year-end deficit of about $280,000, which will be covered by delayed tax collections to arrive in the following fiscal year.

The board has conducted informal negotiations with the Southeast Community College Faculty Association, and a proposed contract for pay and fringe benefits will be presented for adoption.

Faculty pay represents about 73% of the proposed budget, at $4,135,000, an overall increase of 10%. Fringe benefits, working conditions and grievance procedures will also be discussed for possible approval.

In other scheduled business,

the board will appoint a second representative to the Nebraska Association of Community Colleges Trustees (NACCT), still being formed by the six college areas.

The Southeast board earlier named Don Nielsen as its representative to the NACCT feasibility study committee, and Earl Kraft was designated alternate. Both are from Lincoln. The association would lobby and coordinate curricula in the statewide system, from which LB344 eliminated the state governing board.

Together Again

Hollywood (UPI) — Glenda Jackson and Jennie Linden, who costarred in "Women in Love," will head the cast of "Hedda" for Brut Productions.

SeTech Board Sets Hearing On $5.67 Million Budget

A public hearing on the $5.67 million budget — including new local taxation authority — of the Southeast Nebraska Technical Community College will begin at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday.

Immediately following the hearing, in the Lincoln campus Bryan Center, 1701 S. 40th, the college area board will adopt the budget in a special meeting.

The board a week ago agreed to levy a 2.35-mill property tax on residents in the 15-county area; 1.35 mills would generate funds for 1975-76 operations and 1 mill for construction.

The combined assessed millage is less than the 2.5 mills allowed by LB344, the 1975 law reorganizing the technical community college system and its financing.

Each mill will produce about $1.3 million, according to College President Robert S. Eicher.

As proposed, the $5,675,781 budget represents a 17.3% increase over last year's grant total of $4.8 million. Even with an additional $40,000 in tax funds included to help pay for expanded occupation-oriented workshops in 22 communities, Eicher said the new budget is still under the Legislative Fiscal Analyst's recommendation by about $600,000.

The budget calls for increases of 7.7% for the Fairbury campus, to $619,190; 15.3% for Milford, to $2,294,861; 13.8% for Lincoln, to $2,104,922, and 54.8% for area office operations, to $656,808.

The state general fund will provide about $2.85 million.

By levying less than the maximum local millage, the college will incur a year-end deficit of about $280,000, which will be covered by delayed tax collections to arrive in the following fiscal year.

The board has conducted informal negotiations with the Southeast Community College Faculty Association, and a proposed contract for pay and fringe benefits will be presented for adoption.

Faculty pay represents about 7.7% of the proposed budget, at $4,135,000, an overall increase of 10%. Fringe benefits, working conditions and grievance procedures will also be discussed for possible approval.

In other scheduled business,

the board will appoint a second representative to the Nebraska Association of Community Colleges Trustees (NACCT), still being formed by the six college areas.

The Southeast board earlier named Don Nielsen as its representative to the NACCT feasibility study committee, and Earl Kraft was designated alternate. Both are from Lincoln. The association would lobby and coordinate curricula in the statewide system, from which LB344 eliminated the state governing board.

No Busing In Omaha's School Plan

Omaha (AP) — Slightly more than one of every 10 students in the Omaha School District would be involved in integration measures during the coming school year, school officials estimated Thursday.

No forced busing or any other mandatory measures are included in the Phase 1 plan for the court-ordered integration presented Wednesday. The plan is subject to court approval.

Supt. Owen Knutzen said he expected more than 6,000 of the district's 58,000-plus students to be involved "in a variety of voluntary integrative experiences."

Those experiences are the same ones which were in existence last year. Officials said they would be accelerated. The program won "broad public acceptance," Knutzen said.

A tightening of requirements for "special need transfers" is the only item contained in the Phase 1 plan which varies from terms of last school year.

The plan will be submitted to U. S. District Court Judge Albert Schatz Friday in accordance with the June 12 integration ruling by the 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

The court listed no guidelines for Phase 1 in its ruling, saying only that it must be submitted by July 28 and in operation in September. A plan for total integration of the district in September of 1976 must be presented by Jan. 1.

Scholarships Awarded To Nine At UNL

Nine students at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln have been awarded scholarships for the 1975-76 academic year.

Lincoln Star Scholarships have been awarded to three incoming freshman at the School of Journalism. Dal Gerkins of Randolph received a $250 scholarship. Greg Tally and Deborah Van Horn of Lincoln received $100 awards.

Ann Owens, sophomore journalism major from Lincoln, received the Frank J. Fischer and Hal Brown Memorial Scholarships totaling $200.

Roy Smith, a psychology graduate student, has been awarded a one-year fellowship by the National Fellowship Foundation. The renewable fellowship is granted to minority students.

A $500 Continental Oil Co. Scholarship has been awarded to Tim A. Standerford of Humboldt. Harold D. Butler of Lincoln and William D. Vahle of Blair received $250 Continental scholarships.

Electrical engineering students receiving the $200 Holling Family Fund Scholarships were Edward L. Furman of Danbury and Jeffrey B. Lindberg of West Point.

Three Brothers Plead Guilty To Reduced Counts

Three brothers, originally accused in connection with a check forgery ring, pleaded guilty to obtaining money under false pretenses in Lancaster District Court Thursday.

District Court Judge Samuel Van Pelt deferred sentencing until a presentence investigation can be completed.

The three, Terry Wade, 22, Duane Wade, 23, and Gary Wade, 24, all of Columbus, Ohio, were originally charged with possession of a forged instrument, which carries a sentence of from one to 20 years in the Nebraska Penal Complex.

The reduced charge of obtaining money under false pretenses carries a one- to five-year sentence.

A fourth member of the group, Cheryl Irvine, of Columbus, Ohio, was sentenced to 18 to three years at the Women's Reformatory in York after pleading guilty to possession of a forged instrument.

Green Enters Guilty Plea To Three Counts

Michael Green, 20, has pleaded guilty to escaping from prison, robbery and assaulting a police officer.

Green has been returned to the Nebraska Penal Complex, where he is awaiting the results of a presentence investigation before sentencing in Lancaster District Court.

Green was charged in connection with a 90-minute spree on June 5 during which he allegedly escaped from a work detail at the penal complex, robbed a gun store, taking the clerk with him and emptied a revolver at a police officer.

Track's A Natural For Armstrong

By MARK GORDON

Star Sports Writer
Moose Armstrong has always been around horses. His family has always been around horses. So it was only natural that he would find a job at the race track.

"I didn't really know what I wanted to be at first," said one of Nebraska's best-known valets recently at the State Fairgrounds. "I always wanted to work at the tracks. I like to be around horses and horse owners and trainers."

In 1967, he worked in the jockeys' room at Ak-Sar-Ben in Omaha arranging the riders' silks. Then, in 1968, he started as a valet at Turf Paradise at Phoenix.

He's been at that job ever since.

"I put the right weights in the saddles for the riders, shine shoes and boots and generally look after the riders' tack (equipment)," he explained. "I try to help the riders all I can."

His specific riders in Lincoln include Randy Meier, Perry Compton, Jim Bazer, Rodolfo Calderon, John Reeves, Rob Williams, and Tom Greer.

"Most of the riders try to keep their tack clean. But there are more problems when it's muddy," he said. "I have to check that all my riders are carrying the right weight."

He is one of four valets at Lincoln. The others include Bill Bobek, Max Kiplin and John Olcott. There are nine valets at Ak-Sar-Ben.

Armstrong works at all five Nebraska tracks. When Atokad Park near South Sioux City closes in November, Armstrong returns to his home in Anthony, Kan.

During the winter, he helps break (prepare for racing) young horses at the half-mile track there. That track has been operating since 1966, Armstrong noted.

His uncle, Ralph Armstrong, has eight horses at the Fairgrounds. Moose helps him feed and train them in the mornings.

His father, Everett Armstrong, was a jockey on the Nebraska circuit back in the 1930s.

"I've always been around the tracks. I used to come up here to Nebraska to watch the races," he recalled. "I used to go to the races at the county fairs in Kansas and Oklahoma (no pari-mutuel wagering is permitted in those states).

Storm Delays Meet, Klein Holds Lead

By VIRGIL PARKER

Alliance — Shades of the Western Open:

The second round of the Nebraska State Men's Amateur Golf Championship was delayed for 37 minutes when lightning crashed near the Alliance Municipal course here Thursday afternoon.

When it was clear again — except for a few player's nerves — Scotsbluff's Mike Klein held a two-stroke edge going into the final two days of play.

"I was about ready to walk off the course when a guy came out in a cart to tell everyone to head for shelter," the 20-year-old Nebraska Western JC grad recalled later.

Klein was four under par and on the 13th green when the storm began.

"I hit the 13th in regulation and was in the middle of a putt when the first big flash and rumble occurred. I jumped at the ball and wound up with my only three-putt of the tournament so far."

Mildren Quitting

By Associated Press

The National Football League's pre-season camp is barely rolling, but for Jack Mildren, it's the end of the line.

Mildren, who will officially announce his retirement in Orlando, Fla., on Friday after only three seasons, is leaving a disillusional man.

A standout quarterback at Oklahoma, he was drafted by the Baltimore Colts in 1972.

He was converted to safety and also played on the specialty teams.

In 1974 he went with the Patriots and former Oklahoma coach Chuck Fairbanks.

He wanted to play quarterback again, but he couldn't beat out Jim Plunkett.

He said that in college he thought football was everything and he would play for 10 or 15 years.

"I was wrong. I found that football was not the oasis I thought it was."

So at 25 he is becoming an oil executive, taking the opportunity to, as he says, "leave the game on my own terms without waiting to be waived out or cut."

Goit Rolls 300, 734

Ron Goit rolled a 300 game and what is believed to be the highest junior series, a 734, Thursday at Parkway Lanes.

Goit, who rolled a 726 series at Parkway last year, put together games of 300, 210 and 224 this time.

The 17-year-old bowls in three leagues this summer carrying a 180-200 average and has been bowling about 3½ years.

Lifting Said Like Chess

By KEN HAMBLETON

Picture a chess match with each of the pieces weighing up to 600 pounds. That's basically what will be the fare at the National Junior Powerlifting and Mr. U.S.A. championships Saturday and Sunday at the Radisson Cornhusker Hotel.

The powerlifting, "a test of sheer strength," involves not only the actual lifting of the weight but the mental aspects as well, according to meet director Roger Benjamin.

An interesting note is the fact that the youngest competitor in the Junior Mr. U.S.A. meet is 19-year-old Harold Bakkelund.

"Most of the powerlifters, though, will be in the 20s and 30s," Benjamin noted. "The winners of this meet then qualify for the senior competitions. So the name junior doesn't mean age."

"It takes about three or four years of work to get to this meet," Patterson said. "But unlike other sports, the longevity of staying in the sport is better than most."

The meet in Lincoln this weekend is also another step the sport has taken recently, Patterson noted.

"We have kind of taken the sport out of the basements and into the public. And now we are not only gaining international recognition, but it appears that powerlifting will be in the 1980 Olympics," Patterson said.

"The decline of the overhead lifting, which the Olympics now have, in the United States has helped our sport grow," Benjamin said. "And the fact that powerlifting is good training for any sport has also helped."

And she loves working with kids.

"This is the second summer I've been working camps like this one and I just love it," Irby said. "There are seven of us at school this summer helping coach Spencer with his schools. And we probably average 140 to 150 girls for each week-long session."

What Peterson got instead was one of the top girl basketball players in the nation, and he couldn't be happier.

Track's A Natural For Armstrong

By MARK GORDON

Star Sports Writer

Moose Armstrong has always been around horses. His family has always been around horses. So it was only natural that he would find a job at the race tracks.

"I didn't really know what I wanted to be at first," said one of Nebraska's best-known valets recently at the State Fairgrounds. "I always wanted to work at the tracks. I like to be around horses and horse owners and trainers."

In 1967, he worked in the jockeys' room at Ak-Sar-Ben in Omaha arranging the riders' silks. Then, in 1969, he started as a valet at Turf Paradise at Phoenix.

He's been at that job ever since.

"I put the right weights in the saddles for the riders, shine shoes and boots and generally look after the riders' tack (equipment)," he explained. "I try to help the riders all I can."

His specific riders in Lincoln include Randy Meier, Perry Compton, Jim Bazer, Rodolfo Calderon, John Reeves, Rob Williams, and Tom Greer.

"Most of the riders try to keep their tack clean. But there are more problems when it's muddy," he said. "I have to check that all my riders are carrying the right weight."

He is one of four valets at Lincoln. The others include Bill Bobek, Max Kiplin and John Olcott. There are nine valets at Ak-Sar-Ben.

Armstrong works at all five Nebraska tracks. When Atokad Park near South Sioux City closes in November, Armstrong returns to his home in Anthony, Kan.

During the winter, he helps break (prepare for racing) young horses at the half-mile track there. That track has been operating since 1966, Armstrong noted.

His uncle, Ralph Armstrong, has eight horses at the Fairgrounds. Moose helps him feed and train them in the racing program.

His father, Everett Armstrong, was a jockey on the Nebraska circuit back in the 1930s.

"I've always been around the tracks. I used to come up here to Nebraska to watch the races," he recalled. "I used to go to the races at the county fairs in Kansas and Oklahoma (no parimutuel wagering is permitted in those states).

"It was a bad day for the favorites Thursday as all eight of the public choices failed to win.

Favorites Falter

Among the longshots winning were Carl Moyer's Echo Bay's Kes ($41.00) in the sixth and darlings on the board. My Jeff J.J. was nowhere in the first race and my Nobby Dod had lots of trouble in the seventh.

For the third straight day I couldn't even get one of my little Robert Shada's Irish Knave ($24.60) in the eighth.

Mutuel Handle Up

Thursday's mutuel handle of $310,170 was an increase of $34,936 from the corresponding day of last year. That brought the total mutuel handle to 16.63 per cent better than last year's previous record-setting totals.

Patsy's Reign Wins

Patsy's Reign atoned for an opening-day defeat by winning the featured seventh race Thursday as the 4-5 favorite, Patricia Wilcox's Nobby Dod, defeated one runner.

The time was 1:16 1-5 over a track listed as fast yet produced slow times. It was, however, the best time for the 6-furlongs all day.

Patsy's Reign returned $11.60,

$5.40 and $4.60 while Saladito placed for $5.00 and $3.80 and Amporter showed for $6.60.

Thursday's results, Friday's graded entries, page 19.

Aunt Priscilla Loses Again

I'm really having a bad week. I just can't understand what the problem is.

For the third straight day I couldn't even get one of my little darlings on the board. My Jeff J.J. was nowhere in the first race and my Nobby Dod had lots of trouble in the seventh.

I guess I'm going to have to work harder studying the records of these little darlings to find the faster runners.

Anyway, my $104 spree fund dropped to $103.80 — the first time all season I've been behind.

On Friday, I'm going to put my $2 win tickets on Little Sac in the second race and on Mr. Big Bells in the fifth race.

Storm Delays Meet, Klein Holds Lead

By VIRGIL PARKER

Alliance — Shades of the Western Open:

The second round of the Nebraska State Men's Amateur Golf Championship was delayed for 37 minutes when lightning crashed near the Alliance Municipal course here Thursday afternoon.

When it was clear again — except for a few player's nerves — Scottsbluff's Mike Klein held a two-stroke edge going into the final two days of play.

"I was about ready to walk off the course when a guy came out in a cart to tell everyone to head for shelter," the 20-year-old Nebraska Western JC grad recalled later.

Klein was four under par and on the 13th green when the storm began.

"I hit the 13th in regulation and was in the middle of a putt when the first big flash and rumble occurred. I jumped at the ball and wound up with my only three-putt of the tournament so far."

Mildren Quitting

By Associated Press

The National Football League's pre-season camp is barely rolling, but for Jack Mildren, it's the end of the line.

Mildren, who will officially announce his retirement in Orlando, Fla., on Friday after only three seasons, is leaving a disillusioned man.

A standout quarterback at Oklahoma, he was drafted by the Baltimore Colts in 1972.

He was converted to safety and also played on the specialty teams.

In 1974 he went with the Patriots and former Oklahoma coach Chuck Fairbanks.

He wanted to play quarterback again, but he couldn't beat out Jim Plunkett.

He said that in college he thought football was everything and he would play for 10 or 15 years.

"I was wrong. I found that football was not the oasis I thought it was."

So at 25 he is becoming an oil executive, taking the opportunity to, as he says, "leave the game on my own terms without waiting to be waived out or cut."

After a long search, Sasse was about to declare a lost ball when one of his playing partners found it in the cup for an eagle two!

"There wasn't a divot mark on the green so it must have gone in on the fly," Rennie laughed in amazement.

Two other Lincolnenites, Doug Smith and Dan Bahensky, are next in line after each recorded second-day one-under-par 71s.

Smith added his to an opening round 73 for a 144 total, while Bahensky, the only ex-champion in the field, is a stroke back after a first-day 74.

Smith has played in contrast to the rest of the field the first two days. Almost without exception, everyone has scored much lower on the back side. Not Smith. He went 36-37 the first day and 33-38 on Thursday.

"I'm about due to make some birdies on the back nine," Doug says. "But I improved two strokes. If I can keep that up I'll be alright."

The field was cut to the top 54 players and ties for the final two days. A total of 57 golfers — at 159 and better — qualified.

Second day leaders:

Mike Klein, Scottsbluff 67-69-136

Don Brown, Lincoln 72-70-142

Jim Bartek, Omaha 72-70-142

Dave Newton, Lincoln 74-68-142

Doug Smith, Lincoln 73-71-144

Nicklaus, Weiskopf Tied

ILE BIZARD, Que. (AP) — Jack Nicklaus came back from a three-hour weather delay, completed a 65 and tied Tom Weiskopf for the lead Thursday in the uncompleted first round of the $200,000 Canadian Open Golf Tournament.

After the 3 hour, 2 minute delay due to thunderstorms, play was finally resumed at 7 p.m. EDT and eventually halted by darkness at 8:45.

Nine players were stranded on the course and will complete play Friday morning.

K-State Drops Three Sports

MANHATTAN, Kan. (AP) — Kansas State's Intercollegiate Athletics Council adopted a budget Thursday which imposes no further cut on football or basketball.

It will eliminate wrestling, golf and tennis and reduce the budgets for baseball and track.

"As long as I am director of athletics at Kansas State, I am not going to do anything that will hurt football and basketball," Ernie Barrett told the council.

"We've got to look at it as a long-term, short-term type of thing. If we cut football now, we might never be able to recover in the future."

Barrett noted that Kansas State has hired a whole new football coaching staff since last season.

"We must give them the tools to work with," he said. "If we deny them that, we're flirting with the entire future of the athletic program at Kansas State."

The athletic department itself proposed a $300,000 cut in the allotment for intercollegiate football the coming school year. The council last week asked it to lop off $50,000 more, but it did not insist on this further cut when it formally adopted the budget Thursday.

Barrett had pleaded that with the $300,000 cut Kansas State would have the smallest football budget in the Big Eight. Football generates 70 per cent of the department's income, he said. To cut its budget any more would jeopardize Kansas State's ability to compete in the Big Eight. If anything, football needs to be strengthened so it will produce more revenue, he said.

The council also heard from Ellis Rainsberger, the new head football coach.

"I am charged with the re-shuffling of resources," he said.

PSC Gives
Blair Firm
2nd Chance

The Nebraska Public Service Commission Thursday decided to reopen its hearings on a request by the Blair Telephone Co. to raise its rates in northeast Nebraska.

The commission denied Blair's request earlier this year to raise rates high enough to generate nearly $25,000 in additional revenue each year. The telephone company filed a request for the commission to rehear its case, citing improvements in the company's operations that had occurred since the close of the original hearing.

The commission voted 4-1 to rehear the Blair rate case, but stipulated that the commission's staff engineer update his report on current operating conditions before a date is set for a new round of hearings.

Commissioner Eric Rasmussen voted against the proposal, while commissioners Duane Gay, Robert Marland, Jack Romans and James Munnely voted in favor.

Rasmussen initially proposed that Blair's request for a rehearing be denied and said the commission is obligated to make a decision on the record as it was developed at the original hearings. "We are unable to go beyond the scope of the record and remain within the boundary of due process (of law)," he said.

The commission voted 4-1 to amend Rasmussen's original motion to grant the rehearing, contingent upon the staff engineer's updated report. The commission then voted 4-1 again on the amended motion to grant the rehearing.

Job Grant Received By Indians

The United Indians of Nebraska (UIN), a coalition of reservation, urban and Panhandle Indian groups that is sponsored by six Nebraska church organizations, has been awarded a $175,000 grant by the federal government under the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA).

The grant will help finance manpower employment and training services to unemployed and underemployed American Indians.

UIN will concentrate its training program in Omaha, Lincoln and the Panhandle, where 54% of the Indian population is unemployed. Of those employed, less than half have incomes above the poverty line of $4,100.

Although figures weren't available for a statistical breakdown of the three areas, UIN's survey estimates that 700-1,000 Indians are unemployed in the three areas, according to Bob Jeambey, executive director of the Interchurch Ministries of Nebraska.

According to these figures, there could be 200 family units in Lincoln with one or two unemployed family members, Jeambey said.

Nine job slots have been assigned in Lincoln through the Lincoln Indian Center, according to Cynthia Dillenburg, administrator of the Omaha UIN CETA program.

Jeambey said the program will solicit job opportunities from Lincoln employers "with the understanding that this is not a dead end job. The employer gets benefits because an employee can develop a skill while a federal grant pays the salary."

The Nebraska church groups which sponsor UIN are Christian Churches in Nebraska (Disciples), Church of the Brethren, United Church of Christ, United Methodist Church, United Presbyterian Church and Nebraska Church Women United.

State Receives
1,298 Reports
Of Child Abuse

The Nebraska Public Welfare Department has received reports of 449 suspected or confirmed cases of child abuse in Lancaster County since September 1973.

Since Title XX of the Social Security Act took effect Sept. 2, 1973, Nebraskans have been required by law to report any suspected case of child abuse.

The department received 1,298 reports of child abuse in Nebraska during the period which ended July 3. The reports involved 2,282 children and came from 55 counties.

—Staying Ahead—

Donors Should Exercise Caution

By JANE BRYANT QUINN

New York — When you give money to charity, two questions should hover in the back of your mind: (1) How much of this contribution really goes to help the cause as opposed to paying for the charity's own fund-raising and administrative costs, and (2) Is the literature truthful, or does the organization claim more good works than it actually delivers?

The non-profit National Information Bureau, New York City, has been trying to answer questions like this about philanthropies since 1918. It has a number of objective standards by which it judges financial reports and fund-raising techniques.

Not all charities agree with NIB's standards. For example, the bureau thinks that to have policemen and firemen raise money while in uniform puts undue pressure on the contributor, whereas some charities think this is a reasonable way to raise money. (I hold with NIB on this one since a lot of people can be intimidated by a uniform.)

Melvin Van de Werveen, head of NIB, emphasized that all of the 500 groups he reports on do some good, even those that don't meet the bureau's standards. But he tries to get those with lax procedures to improve themselves in the interest of doing an even better job.

Here is a sample of the 100 or so charities he is currently quarreling with, and some of the reasons for it.

The National Easter Seal Society for Crippled Children and Adults, Various Easter Seal locals use fund-raising methods frowned on by NIB, such as using uniformed personnel to solicit money and sending out sweepstakes tickets in fund-raising letters. The latter practice is not only expensive, but holds out the promise of a financial reward — something NIB thinks charities shouldn't do.

The National Easter Seal Society points out that there's nothing illegal in these techniques, that they're okay with the Better Business Bureau, and that sweepstakes are used by such leading companies as Proctor & Gamble and Reader's Digest. Whether successful commercial techniques should be applied wholesale to charitable fund-raising is really for the donor to decide. In NIB's view, sweepstakes tickets are a "substandard practice in philanthropy."

The Muscular Dystrophy Assn NIB has several points of difference with this group. To take one example, NIB says that when the association tells donors about their fund-raising costs, they often highlight only the costs associated with the national organization and underplay — or leave out — costs incurred by the locals. This can mislead a donor into thinking the group spends more money on charitable activities than it actually does.

MDA replies that in some cases the combined costs have not been available, and in others they are given (although not "highlighted"). Starting with the 1975 report, combined costs will be available — although the "highlighting" question may remain a problem. The annual report, for example, gives national fund-raising costs as an easy-to-grasp percentage, but the higher combined cost is given only as a dollar figure.

Jane Bryant Quinn

"That's what the accountants tell us to do it," MDA says, adding that the NIB report is "biased."

The National Federation for the Blind. This group declines to furnish NIB with information on its fund-raising arm (which is a private, profit-making corporation), so the bureau can come to no conclusion as to the reasonableness of its fund-raising costs. The federation also sends out unordered merchandise, such as neckties and greeting cards. NIB disapproves of this practice, not only because of its high cost but because it puts heavy pressure on recipients to give.

The federation agrees that this approach raises more money than they'd get otherwise, but says that people want the merchandise. "It's not illegal to send something in the mail to stimulate contributions," says president Kenneth Jernigan. "The NIB has no authority to constitute itself as a standard-setter."

NIB has another group of charities on a "no conclusion" list, which basically means that their status is still being negotiated. These include the National Foundation (March of Dimes), Save the Children Federation, Project Hope, the American Heart Assn and the American Cancer Society. (Needless to say, these charities have plenty of conclusions about NIB, specifically that they don't like the designation.)

Also on the "no conclusion" list is Ralph Nader's Group, the Center for the Study of Responsive Law, which has not in five years responded to NIB's request for financial data. The center says they get so many requests like that they just don't have time to handle them. This does not seem to be a reasonable position for an organization that favors full disclosure and public accountability.

Among the 150 or so groups that meet NIB's standards are the Arthritis Foundation, Care, the Experiment in International Living, the American Friends Service Committee, the League of Women Voters, Goodwill, Boy and Girl Scouts, the American Civil Liberties Union, the American Enterprise Institute, the Red Cross, and the National Council on Alcoholism. To receive reports on the charities you're interested in, you'd have to join the NIB (419 Park Ave South, New York City) at a cost of $15 a year ($25 for corporations and foundations).

Stock Mart Bargaining Sporadic

NEW YORK (AP) — Alternative waves of selling and bargain hunting left the stock market in a widely scattered pattern Thursday.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials ended a string of six straight declines with a 3.60 gain to 840.27.

But the over-all New York Stock Exchange tally showed a broad downturn, with 1,047 losers and only 387 gainers among the 1,810 issues traded.

The NYSE's composite index was down 13 at 48.27, and Standard & Poor's 500-stock index was off 11 at 90.07.

Big Board volume increased slightly to 20.55 million shares from 20.15 million on Wednesday.

Brokers described the market as probing nervously for direction after the 45-point slide in the Dow since the middle of last week.

Newton D. Zinder at E. F. Hutton & Co. termed the buying that appeared sporadically during the session "strictly a technical bounce."

Donors Should Exercise Caution

By JANE BRYANT QUINN
New York — When you give money to charity, two questions should hover in the back of your mind: (1) How much of this contribution really goes to help the cause, as opposed to paying for the charity's own fund-raising and administrative costs, and (2) Is the literature truthful, or does the organization claim more good works than it actually delivers?

Jane
Bryant

1975 report, combined costs will be available — although the "highlighting" question may remain a problem. The annual report, for example, gives national fund-raising costs as an easy-to-grasp percentage, but the higher combined cost is given only as a dollar figure.

"That's how the accountants tell us to do it," MDA says, adding that the NIB report is "biased."

The non-profit National Information Bureau in New York City has been trying to answer questions like this about philanthropies since 1918. It has a number of objective standards by which it judges financial reports and fund-raising techniques.

Not all charities agree with NIB's standards. For example, the bureau thinks that to have policemen and firemen raise money while in uniform puts undue pressure on the contributor, whereas some charities think this is a reasonable way to raise money. (I hold with NIB on this one, since a lot of people can be intimidated by a uniform.)

Melvin Van de Werveen, head of NIB, emphasized that all of the 500 groups he reports on do some good, even those that don't meet the bureau's standards.

But he tries to get those with lax procedures to improve themselves in the interest of doing an even better job.

Here is a sample of the 100 or so charities he is currently quarreling with, and some of the reasons for it:

The National Easter Seal Society for Crippled Children and Adults. Various Easter Seal locals use fund-raising methods frowned on by NIB, such as using uniformed personnel to solicit money and sending out sweepstakes tickets in fund-raising letters. The latter practice is not only expensive, but holds out the promise of a financial reward — something NIB thinks charities shouldn't do.

The National Easter Seal Society points out that there's nothing illegal in these techniques, that they're okay with the Better Business Bureau, and that sweepstakes are used by such leading companies as Proctor & Gamble and Reader's Digest. Whether successful commercial techniques should be applied wholesale to charitable fund-raising is really for the donor to decide. In NIB's view, sweepstakes tickets are a "substandard practice in philanthropy."

It looked as though the market was bouncing back and forth between investors' impulses to do some bargain-hunting with many issues well down from their highs of early last week, and continued edginess over inflation and interest rate prospects.

The federation agrees that this approach raises more money than they'd get otherwise, but says that people want the merchandise. Frontier, Union Will Resume Contract Talks Denver (AP) — Frontier Airlines was scheduled to resume contract negotiations with the Airline Employees Association, which represents about 1,600 employees, officials said.

Larry A. Bishop, director of corporate communications for Frontier, said the contract was opened for renegotiation last Jan.

The new 747 jet freighter is capable of carrying 240,000 pounds, an airline official said.

This is the first time this type of aircraft has been operated between Taipei and the U.S.

Negotiations were recessed June 27 at the request of Harris Bickford, a mediator with the National Mediation Board in Washington.

The new 747 jet freighter is capable of carrying 240,000 pounds, an airline official said. This is the first time this type of aircraft has been operated between Taipei and the U.S.

London (AP) — The number of jobless would double or triple if foreign investors pulled their money out of inflation-ridden Britain, the government's top finance minister warned.

GM Chairman Thomas A.

Murphy issued another optimistic prediction of a sales recovery by the industry, saying sales would be over 10 million cars next year, including imports. That would be about 18% higher than this year but still well below the 11.4 million cars sold in record 1973.

The longest recession since the end of World War II is rapidly coming to an end," Murphy told a Future Farmers of America meeting in Washington.

"New housing starts, industrial production, sales of cars and of other consumer goods, total non-farm employment, personal income — they are all up."

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE — Here's how to work it:
A X Y D L B A A X R
is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

★ BY SIDNEY OMARR ★

Forecast for Friday

The woman with Mars in Cancer runs her household in military style, a place for this, a time for that and strict adherence to discipline regarding expenditures and necessities. Mars-in-Cancer woman appears independent, self-sufficient, but she craves a "strong man" who can stand up to her, can disagree with her and, in the long run, can protect her. If you are a woman with Mars in Cancer, I hope you have found the "right man."
